Ecuador strike pushes back austerity

By Michael Otto and Zoila Ramírez
Ibarra, Imbabura, Ecuador

Oct. 14—Eleven days of massive protest, especially by Indigenous communities marching all over Ecuador, forced President Lenin Moreno to repeal his Oct. 1 Decree #883 ending fuel subsidies. Increased fuel costs also mean higher prices for food, public transportation and much more, so this step was the final straw for already suffering Ecuadorians.

By Monday, Oct. 14, at noon, however, Moreno showed once again why people in Ecuador consider him a liar and a traitor. Government authorities raided progressive political leaders’ homes, focusing on elected leaders of the Citizen’s Revolution — the party that led Ecuador from 2007-17 — and arrested them.

Moreno had ordered massive state violence against the Indigenous people and their organizations, but was forced to call for negotiations on Sunday, Oct. 13. As people around the country learned that Moreno had pulled back from increasing fuel prices, they exploded in jubilation and a new sense of their own power, even as they felt anxious about an imminent double cross.

Manufactured crisis

The Citizens’ Revolution of former President Rafael Correa considers Moreno a traitor because he was elected to carry out their progressive platform, but instead reverted many of its gains for the people, especially for the poor. Moreno forgave $4.5 billion in tax debt of the rich, allowing billions to flow to financial tax havens. Consequently, Moreno surrendered to the International Monetary Fund and neoliberal policies, including privatization of public companies.

The IMF demanded Ecuador end fuel subsidies, fire public workers or reduce their salaries, and impose other conditions of austerity that primarily hurt the poor. Moreno, foisted on Sunday, Oct. 13. According to yesterday’s agreement, talks between the government and a commission of Indigenous representatives will determine the very important details of the new decree replacing #883. At a news conference today, CONAIE leaders had to defend themselves against charges they had “betrayed” the movement by making a deal with Moreno.

The masters demand repression

Within ten days of the original decree, Ecuadorians had risen up in every city, town and community to demand the end of the Moreno government. As of Oct. 13, the country’s north-south Pan American highway was still blocked by well-organized Indigenous people in many places. In as many as ten provinces, such as Pastaza and Cañar, people were occupying government buildings.

Before the agreement, the National Federation of the Chambers of Industry was reported to be calling for emergency action by the state armed forces to impose what it calls “law and order.” Open the highways and prosecute the insurgents, people who call “the perpetrators, accomplices and collaborators,” and the

Prisoners’ rights

LGBTQ2+ liberation now!

GM strike in second month

Lights out in California

EDITORSIAL Syria and Turkey

China: 70 years of revolution

NBA & Hong Kong 8
Eyewitness Shanghai 9
EDITORSIAL Trade war 10

Oct. 14, 2019

Indigenous Peoples’ Day

Workers World Party is in firm solidarity with Indigenous peoples in the struggle to abolish the current “Columbus Day” as a national U.S. holiday and to rename and transform it into “Indigenous Peoples’ Day.”

Organizing by Indigenous peoples, who steadfastly refuse to mark genocide as a holiday, has already resulted in at least six states and 150 cities and towns making the progressive change in the U.S. Indigenous peoples have waged centuries of struggle to survive and advance against the death-dealing tide of settler-colonialism in the U.S. The move to rename the holiday is an attempt to correct official history as told by invaders and colonizers.

The 1492 “voyage of discovery” by Columbus, which every U.S. school child is taught, was in fact a voyage of conquest by Christian Europeans. That conquest was officially blessed by the highest religious authority. In 1493, Pope Alexander VI issued a papal bull giving the spiritual, political and legal justification for seizing any land not inhabited by Christians. The fact that there were Indigenous peoples living on that land was known by the authors of this document, deliberately crafted to justify colonization.

The “new world” of European conquest was established on the basis of genocide, land theft and brutal injustice to Indigenous peoples. And eventually, all over the U.S., statues went up to honor the perpetrators, accomplices and collaborators, and the

Follow us!

workers.org

Int’l Women’s Congress, Venezuela 6
Cuba’s reforestation, part 2 7

subscribe to Workers World

☐ 4 weeks trial $4  ☐ 1 year subscription $30
☐ Sign me up for the WWP Supporter Program: workers.org/donate

Name
Email
Phone
City / State / Zip

147 W. 24th St., 2nd Floor, New York, NY 10011 212.627.2994

Workers World Weekly Newspaper workers.org

Continued on page 10

Continued on page 6

1 of 3 photos by Michael Otto

Lights out in California

12

12

ECUADOR

Ecuador

Ecuador

147 W. 24th St., 2nd Floor, New York, NY 10011

212.627.2994

workers.org

Follow us!

workers.org

Int’l Women’s Congress, Venezuela 6
Cuba’s reforestation, part 2 7

subscribe to Workers World

☐ 4 weeks trial $4  ☐ 1 year subscription $30
☐ Sign me up for the WWP Supporter Program: workers.org/donate

Name
Email
Phone
City / State / Zip

147 W. 24th St., 2nd Floor, New York, NY 10011 212.627.2994

Workers World Weekly Newspaper workers.org

Continued on page 10

Continued on page 6
Workers World Party is a revolutionary Marxist-Leninist party inside the belly of the imperialist beast. We are a multinational, multigenerational and multigendered organization that not only aims to abolish capitalism, but to build a socialist society because it’s the only way forward! Capitalism and imperialism threaten the peoples of the world and the planet itself in the neverending quest for ever-greater profits.

Capitalism means war and austerity, racism and repression, attacks on im/migrants, misogyny, LGBTQ oppression and mistreatment of people with disabilities. It means seemingly insurmountable student debt, if they even make it. It means joblessness, increasing homelessness and impoverishment and lack of hope for the future. No social problems can be solved under capitalism.

The U.S. is the richest country in the world, yet no one has a guaranteed right to shelter, food, water, health care, education or anything else — unless they can pay for it. People are poorer than ever, and youth are saddled with seemingly insurmountable student debt, if they even make it to college. Black, Brown and Indigenous youth and trans people are ganged down by cops and bigots on a regular basis.

The ruthless ruling class today seeks to wipe out decades of gains and benefits won by hard-fought struggles by people’s movements. The super-rich and their political representatives have intensified their attacks on the working class, multinational, multigender and multigenerational working class. It is time to point the blame at — and challenge the capitalist system.

WWP fights for socialism because the working class produces all wealth in society, and this wealth should remain in their hands, not be stolen in the form of capitalist profits. The wealth workers create should be socially owned and its distribution planned to satisfy and guarantee basic human needs.

Since 1959, Workers World Party has been out in the streets defending the workers and oppressed here and worldwide. If you’re interested in Marxism, socialism and fighting for a socialist future, please contact a WWP branch near you.

If you are interested in joining Workers World Party contact: 212.627.2994

Workers World
147 W. 24th St., 2nd Fl.
New York, NY 10011
Phone: 212.627.2994
E-mail: ww@workers.org
Web: www.workers.org

Vol. 61, No. 42 • Oct. 17, 2019
Closing date: Oct. 19, 2019
Editor: Deirdre Griswold
Managing Editors: John Catalinotto, Martha Grevatt, Monica Moorehead, Minnie Bruce Pratt
Web Editors: Ben Carroll, John Steffin
Production & Design Editors: Gery Armstrong, Danny Randolph, Scott Williams
Copyediting and Proofreading: Paddy Colligan, Amy S. Kadushin, S. Lanie
Contributing Editors: LeLani Dowell, G. Dunkel, K. Durkin, Teresa Gutierrez, Betsy Piette, Gloria Rubac
Mundo Obrero: Alberto García, Teresa Gutierrez, Carlos Vargas

Supporter Program: Coordinator Sue Davis
Copyright © 2019 Workers World. Verbatim copying and distribution of articles is permitted in any medium without royalty provided this notice is preserved.

Workers World (ISSN-1070-4205) is published weekly except the last week of December by WW Publishers, 147 W. 24th St. 2nd Fl., New York, NY 10011. Phone: 212.627.2994. Subscriptions: One year: $35; institutions: $35. Letters to the editor may be condensed and edited. Articles can be freely reprinted, with credit to Workers World, 147 W. 24th St. 2nd Fl., New York, NY 10011. Back issues and individual articles are available on microfilm and/or photocopy from NA Publishing, Inc, P.O. Box 998, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-0998. Periodicals postage paid at New York, N.Y. and distribution of articles is permitted in any medium without royalty provided this notice is preserved.

Workers World, 147 W. 24th St., 2nd Fl., New York, NY 10011
E-mail: ww@workers.org
Web: www.workers.org
When trans women die
By Mumia Abu-Jamal

In recent weeks, we have seen naked violence unleashed against trans women, directed against them by the state in the form of police beatings and by rightist forces in this emerging fascist movement in America. What does this mean? Why now? I believe it comes now for specific strategic purposes, for trans women stand on the periphery of the gay rights movement, not its nucleus. This means they are isolated, and as such they are targeted by rightist forces to isolate them further. We must not forget that they are after all Black folks in a land and in an era where and when Black lives remain cheap. Now as Black, gay and transgender: See where the analysis goes? And if it’s Black trans women today, it’ll be Black straight women tomorrow. And Black children soon thereafter.

That’s the nature of the fascist beast. Attack those who seem weak, isolate them, destroy them. Since Charlottesville, we’ve seen the emergence of rightist racist forces who are committed to destroying Black life and to proving that Black lives don’t matter.

Scores of major international corporations as well as local businesses had contingents of their LGBTQ2+ workers clad in company-themed T-shirts, which dominated the march. There was only one, very visible union marching, the International Alliance of Theaters Stage Employees.

The Chelsea Manning unit represented progressive politics in a sea of corporatization. Additionally, students from area high schools and colleges, congregants from numerous churches, members of LGBTQ2+ service organizations, deco- rators and restaurateurs, several LGBTQ2+ bands and multiple politi- cians with their supporters marched in intermittent rain past thousands of energetic and loud parade watchers.

Workers World Party is proud to be a sponsoring organization of these efforts to raise awareness of Chelsea Manning’s important role in exposing the war crimes of the U.S.

Workers World Party is proud to be a sponsoring organization of these efforts to raise awareness of Chelsea Manning’s important role in exposing the war crimes of the U.S.

By Dianne Mathiowetz

For over three hours on Oct. 12, tens of thousands of Atlanta Pride marchers passed by stationary teams on both sides of Peachtree Street with banners and leaflets calling for freedom for Chelsea Manning, the anti-war whistleblower.

Upon spotting the banners reading, “Free Chelsea Manning! Jail War Criminals!,” countless participants reached for flyers, cheered, gave a thumbs-up or shouted “Free Chelsea.”

The flyer promoted an Oct. 29 teach-in on Chelsea Manning’s heroic actions in the context of broader anti-imperialist and anti-repression struggles, particularly by queer and trans people.

On Oct. 11, the same banners were carried in the annual trans march that saw hundreds of people filling multiple blocks of midtown Atlanta streets. In 2010, the military intelligence analyst then known as Bradley Manning released some 750,000 documents to WikiLeaks, revealing the lies and misin- formation being told to the U.S. public about the Iraq war.

Manning was jailed, court-martialed in 2013 and sentenced to 35 years in prison. While in prison, Manning announced her transition to Chelsea Manning while in federal custody. Her sentence was com- muted to time served in 2017. While in prison, Manning announced her transition to Chelsea Manning while in federal custody. Her sentence was commuted to time served in 2017.

The Atlanta Pride festivities rank among the largest in the U.S. with LGBTQ2+ people coming from the U.S. and other countries to celebrate the diversity and resilience of their commu-

Scores of major international corpo-

By Phoebe Eckfeldt

Hundreds of families, friends and supporters of prisoners packed the Massachusetts State House Oct. 8 to testify at a hearing on “Mumia and the Fight Against Mass Incarceration.” This bill, H33538, would eliminate life sentences without parole. A person serving a life sentence would be allowed to have a parole hearing after 25 years, then every 5 years. This would apply retroactively, so people currently in prison would be affected.

Prison abolition activists refer to life without parole, or LWOP, as “death by incarceration” or “the other death pen-

African Americans are 4-5 times more likely to be convicted for drug possession, even though whites use drugs at a higher rate.

Another law from that era is the “Three Strikes” law, where a person convicted of three separate felonies receives the maxi- mum penalty, usually 25 years to life with no parole.

Determined to speak for their loved ones, their friends and the walls, hundreds waited hours, standing or sitting on the floor, to testify in favor of the bill.

Suzette Cook, a community organizer in Rhode Island, told the crowd and leg-

The prisons are a big business. Prisons provide free or cheap labor. You have people basically working for noth-

We spoke at the 13th amendment that [addressed] freed men and women [who] were enslaved, inside it is a clause that [addressed] freed men and women [who] were enslaved, inside it is a clause that proved that Black lives don’t matter.

What does this mean? Why now? I believe it comes now for specific strategic purposes, for trans women stand on the periphery of the gay rights movement, not its nucleus. This means they are isolated, and as such they are targeted by rightist forces to isolate them further. We must not forget that they are after all Black folks in a land and in an era where and when Black lives remain cheap. Now as Black, gay and transgender: See where the analysis goes? And if it’s Black trans women today, it’ll be Black straight women tomorrow. And Black children soon thereafter.

That’s the nature of the fascist beast. Attack those who seem weak, isolate them, destroy them. Since Charlottesville, we’ve seen the emergence of rightist racist forces who are committed to destroying Black life and to proving that Black lives don’t matter.

Scores of major international corpo-

By Dianne Mathiowetz

For over three hours on Oct. 12, tens of thousands of Atlanta Pride marchers passed by stationary teams on both sides of Peachtree Street with banners and leaflets calling for freedom for Chelsea Manning, the anti-war whistleblower.

Upon spotting the banners reading, “Free Chelsea Manning! Jail War Criminals!,” countless participants reached for flyers, cheered, gave a thumbs-up or shouted “Free Chelsea.”

The flyer promoted an Oct. 29 teach-in on Chelsea Manning’s heroic actions in the context of broader anti-imperialist and anti-repression struggles, particularly by queer and trans people.

On Oct. 11, the same banners were carried in the annual trans march that saw hundreds of people filling multiple blocks of midtown Atlanta streets. In 2010, the military intelligence analyst then known as Bradley Manning released some 750,000 documents to WikiLeaks, revealing the lies and misin-formation being told to the U.S. public about the Iraq war.

Manning was jailed, court-martialed in 2013 and sentenced to 35 years in prison. While in prison, Manning announced her transition to Chelsea Manning while in federal custody. Her sentence was commuted to time served in 2017.

The Atlanta Pride festivities rank among the largest in the U.S. with LGBTQ2+ people coming from the U.S. and other countries to celebrate the diversity and resilience of their community to overcome state and social discrimi-

Scores of major international corporations as well as local businesses had contingents of their LGBTQ2+ workers clad in company-themed T-shirts, which dominated the march. There was only one, very visible union marching, the International Alliance of Theater Stage Employees.

The Chelsea Manning unit represented progressive politics in a sea of corporatization. Additionally, students from area high schools and colleges, congregants from numerous churches, members of LGBTQ2+ service organizations, decorators and restaurateurs, several LGBTQ2+ bands and multiple politicians with their supporters marched in intermittent rain past thousands of energetic and loud parade watchers.

Workers World Party is proud to be a sponsoring organization of these efforts to raise awareness of Chelsea Manning’s important role in exposing the war crimes of the U.S.

Those prisoners are Black. Massachusetts has the second highest percentage of its total prison population sentenced to LWOP — 1,018 out of about 8,500 in 2016. (New Boston Post, March 1)

Nationally, thousands are serving LWOP for nonviolent drug offenses and such acts as shoplifting or siphoning gas.

Racist, cruel laws have filled prisons.

In the 1980s Congress enacted mandatory minimum sentences for drug crimes.

According to the ACLU, “African Americans are 4-5 times more likely to be convicted for drug possession, even though whites use drugs at a higher rate.”

Another law from that era is the “Three Strikes” law, where a person convicted of three separate felonies receives the maximum penalty, usually 25 years to life with no parole.

Determined to speak for their loved ones, their friends and the walls, hundreds waited hours, standing or sitting on the floor, to testify in favor of the bill.

Suzette Cook, a community organizer in Rhode Island, told the crowd and legislators: “The prisons are a big business. Prisons provide free or cheap labor. You have people basically working for nothing; and if they are not working for free, they are working for wages like 25 cents an hour, that if we saw this happening in other industries, we would be very critical.

“When you read the 13th amendment that [addressed] freed men and women [who] were enslaved, inside it is a clause allowing the enslavement of people who were convicted of a crime.

“Two million people in the U.S. are incarcerated at this time, my husband Sam Smith being one of them. He was the last 18 years systematically enslaved to a system that has been designed to keep him in there. In there, I have been aware from his family, friends, his ill mother and, most importantly, me.

As a result of a corrupt judicial system, we have wasted a lot of taxpayers’ dollars forcing him to prove what he did not do and not giving him a fair trial.

“My husband is specifically under this bill, he was sentenced to life without parole, and he was 17 at the time and charged as an adult. Under this law, all I request is that he be given a fair chance to come home and show that he is a productive member of this society.”

By Dianne Mathiowetz

For over three hours on Oct. 12, tens of thousands of Atlanta Pride marchers passed by stationary teams on both sides of Peachtree Street with banners and leaflets calling for freedom for Chelsea Manning, the anti-war whistleblower.

Upon spotting the banners reading, “Free Chelsea Manning! Jail War Criminals!,” countless participants reached for flyers, cheered, gave a thumbs-up or shouted “Free Chelsea.”

The flyer promoted an Oct. 29 teach-in on Chelsea Manning’s heroic actions in the context of broader anti-imperialist and anti-repression struggles, particularly by queer and trans people.

On Oct. 11, the same banners were carried in the annual trans march that saw hundreds of people filling multiple blocks of midtown Atlanta streets. In 2010, the military intelligence analyst then known as Bradley Manning released some 750,000 documents to WikiLeaks, revealing the lies and misinformation being told to the U.S. public about the Iraq war.

Manning was jailed, court-martialed in 2013 and sentenced to 35 years in prison. While in prison, Manning announced her transition to Chelsea Manning while in federal custody. Her sentence was commuted to time served in 2017.

The Atlanta Pride festivities rank among the largest in the U.S. with LGBTQ2+ people coming from the U.S. and other countries to celebrate the diversity and resilience of their community to overcome state and social discrimination and repression.

Scores of major international corporations as well as local businesses had contingents of their LGBTQ2+ workers clad in company-themed T-shirts, which dominated the march. There was only one, very visible union marching, the International Alliance of Theater Stage Employees.

The Chelsea Manning unit represented progressive politics in a sea of corporatization. Additionally, students from area high schools and colleges, congregants from numerous churches, members of LGBTQ2+ service organizations, decorators and restaurateurs, several LGBTQ2+ bands and multiple politicians with their supporters marched in intermittent rain past thousands of energetic and loud parade watchers.

Workers World Party is proud to be a sponsoring organization of these efforts to raise awareness of Chelsea Manning’s important role in exposing the war crimes of the U.S.
A month on strike
GM workers won’t back down
By Martha Grevatt
Detroit
On Oct. 15, close to 50,000 General Motors workers walked off the job for 31 days—striking for one month. The last time this many workers struck a single company was in 2007, also a GM strike lasting only two days. Determination is growing, not waning with time, and the longer workers are out the less they say they will settle for when a contract is finally presented to them.

For the past week the United Auto Workers and GM have traded offers. The UAW says if GM agrees to its latest contract proposal, they will bring it to the striking members for a vote. But the company has not agreed to anything; the UAW says GM is “playing games.” (uaw.org)

One of GM’s “games” was sending a letter appending to each striking employee directly. GM gave a vague description of its latest offer to the UAW and dragged out negotiations and prolonging the strike. This is an illegal Unfair Labor Practice known as “direct dealing.”

GM and CEO Mary Barra apparently see themselves as above the law, as they demonstrated previously when Barra announced in 2018 that four U.S. plants would close. Three were closed before the strike, violating contract language prohibiting closing or shutting plants during the life of the contract. GM is not respecting conditions mandated by the state of Michigan when it granted billions in tax breaks. But the unwritten caveat under capitalist law is that the exploiting class is not bound to respect laws or legal contracts when their class interest is impinged upon.

Strikers are not so fortunate, even though they are engaged in what’s known as “protected concerted activity” under the National Labor Relations Act. Police in Cleveland, Detroit and other cities are forcing strikers to let management and delivery drivers through the gates. Some supervisors have even brought in non-union workers to work on the lines during the strike.

Picketers have been arrested at plants in Tennessee, Texas, and Kansas.

Potluck solidarity with striking GM workers
Around 100 United Auto Workers’ supporters gathered in Langhorne, Pa., at the General Motors Service Parts Operations warehouse on Oct. 13. Workers, both unionized and not, came from surrounding New Jersey and Pennsylvania cities and towns, some from as far away as Philadelphia to break bread and barbeque in a massive potluck dinner.

Solidarity Sunday, a grassroots, community-organized effort, saw workers from all sorts of jobs come out to affirm the GM workers’ efforts for the second week in a row. Union affiliation included the Communication Workers, several American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees district councils and Working Educators, a progressive teachers’ group from Philadelphia.

A coalition of educators and community members in New Jersey, NJ21 United, also attended. Members of Industrial Workers of the World, Workers’ Solidarity Network, Workers World Party and Democratic Socialists of America were on hand. A collection was taken that raised funds to cover one and a half weeks of food for the striking workers’ families.

— Report by Workers World
Philadelphia bureau

Obituary
A. Grace Lee Mims: a cultural treasure
By Martha Grevatt
Cleveland
People-filled St. James African Methodist Episcopal church in Cleveland on Oct. 11 to celebrate the life of Dr. A. Grace Lee Mims. She was remembered as a gifted musical artist, educator, librarian, music scholar, radio host, aunt, cousin, neighbor, friend, church member and more. Tributes and anecdotes painted a picture of a woman who was always taking care of her community.

Mims was highly regarded, in the city and beyond, for her advocacy for and to entertain the arts and arts education. Several of her students attended the university, with a special tribute to the church and organ piano.

Mims worked for decades as a librarian—in Detroit at Cleveland Public Library and for ten years in Cleveland Public Schools at Glenville High School. The Glenville neighborhood is perhaps best known for the 1980s rebellion against racist police brutality. While at Glenville High, she coordinated the Black Arts Festival, assembled Ohio’s largest collection of books on African-American history and culture, and helped launch the first Afrocentric lecture course in CPS. Black celebrities, including Muhammad Ali, participated in the Black Arts Festival.

Mims earned a master’s degree from Case Western Reserve University and was awarded an honorary doctorate in music from Cleveland State University in recognition of her many contributions to the arts and education.

At Byrd Mims was still producing her radio show, taping two shows every other week. It was on Oct. 3, after she did not show up at the WCLV studio as expected, that she was found dead in her home.

Monica Moorehead, a WW managing editor and Mims’ niece, told WW, “My aunt was sympathetic to not only the plight of Black people but to people of color around the world. She loved to talk politics around the dinner table during our visits to Snow Hill. I will always cherish our time together, from when she took me to a concert when I was 16 years old until she came to a Cleveland campaign rally in 2016—at the age of 86—to hear me speak as the presidential candidate for Workers World Party. She was a very special aunt and woman.”

-- By Martha Grevatt

---

GM sent its letter to individual workers, the company also released it to the media. This was a shallow ploy designed to leverage public opinion to put pressure on the UAW. GM is the UAW’s opportunistic decision to restore health benefits initially cut at the strike’s onset.

Spend a few minutes on any pickup line and listen to the cacophony of honking horns, and you will witness the effectiveness of GM’s public relations gimmicks! Donations of food, water, coffee and firewood to help strikers keep warm arrive regularly at the lines and local union halls. Other unions are joining strikers and raising money. Businesses are buying everything from free haircuts and pet food to $1 hamburgers at a bar and grill.

Backbone of the strike
The rank and file, holding down the line and making huge financial sacrifices, are the backbone of the strike. From social media comments and memes to hip-hop videos made on the strike lines, they are showing class awareness, thoughtfulness, humor, creativity and above all militancy.

Two members of UAW Local 163 in Romulus, Mich., have been holding regular picket concerts of GM world headquarters in downtown Detroit. On Oct. 9, they built a “red flag” protest via social media. Strikers and supporters traveled from Flint, Toledo and Cleveland to attend the action, which was not sanctioned by the UAW.

Opinion on the lines varies when it comes to trusting the top leadership. The head negotiator, UAW Vice President Terry Dittes, has thus far been linked to the corruption scandal that erupted after a federal investigation made embarrassment and bribe-taking public. Many strikers see the federal government’s ultra-right motives in going after the union right before the strike began.

Some union members feel Dittes is genuinely fighting in their interest, but others are likely of anything at the International. Either way, the red flag action raised a serious question: Why don’t the UAW and the AFL-CIO mobilize their members and vast numbers of supporters for a mass strike rally in front of GM? Or how about mass picketing to defy—and defeat—court injunctions that limit pickets and enable line-crossers? Much more could be done to win this strike.

GM is still resisting union demands to make temporary workers full time with seniority and other rights. Reports on the latest company proposal indicate they would have to work three years without interruption to upgrade. In other words, they would have to start over after an unplanned “interruption” such as a layoff or medical leave.

Given the preponderance of low-wage, part-time and precarious work in today’s gig economy, strikers will tell you they are fighting for the whole working class.

Grevatt is a UAW activist who retired from Fiat Chrysler Automobiles after 31 years. She continues to serve on the board of UAW Local 869.

---

---

---

A song on the 1973 album, now considered a jazz classic, paid tribute to the Attica rebellion. Mims also recorded a 1981 solo album, “Spirituals.”

Howard Mims and A. Grace Lee met while students at Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala.

A song on the 1973 album, now considered a jazz classic, paid tribute to the Attica rebellion. Mims also recorded a 1981 solo album, “Spirituals.”

Howard Mims and A. Grace Lee met while students at Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala.

A song on the 1973 album, now considered a jazz classic, paid tribute to the Attica rebellion. Mims also recorded a 1981 solo album, “Spirituals.”

Howard Mims and A. Grace Lee met while students at Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala.

A song on the 1973 album, now considered a jazz classic, paid tribute to the Attica rebellion. Mims also recorded a 1981 solo album, “Spirituals.”

Howard Mims and A. Grace Lee met while students at Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala.
Criminal PG&E’s latest outages are an outrage

By Judy Greenspan
Oakland, Calif.

From midnight Oct. 9 to 2 p.m. Oct. 12, more than a million people in Northern and Central California were without electric power. This was not from a fire, explosion or natural disaster, but a planned action by the corporate heads of Pacific Gas & Electric — an action that many people believe was driven by corporate greed rather than people’s safety.

PG&E has been on the hot seat for its mismanagement, financial shortcuts and inability to avoid large disasters in its system from the 2010 San Bruno pipeline explosion, which killed 8 people and injured 58 and was caused by failure to inspect and maintain safe pipelines, to the 2018 Camp Fire tragedy in Paradise which killed at least 88 people, destroyed homes, businesses and most structures in the town and left thousands homeless. (tinyurl.com/y66aoy28)

PG&E faces massive lawsuits and $30 billion in liabilities from its role in the Camp Fire tragedy and filed for bankruptcy in January.

Let’s also not forget the 2017 series of fires in and around Santa Rosa, which destroyed over 5,600 structures and killed at least 22 people. In 2015, in Amador County, the Butte Fire destroyed 365 homes and killed two people — a Sacramento judge found PG&E at fault and fined the company $8 million. Additionally, California Fire and Rescue and the California Fire Protection Association have questioned the necessity and the size of the PG&E power shutdown; the mayor of Nevada City organized a “light parade” to protest the shut-off. State Sen. Jerry Hill from San Mateo called the shutdowns “excessive” and said, “PG&E clearly hasn’t made its system safe. These shutdowns are supposed to be surgical. But shutting down power to 800,000 people in 31 counties is by no means surgical.” (Los Angeles Times, Oct. 9)

Many people feel that PG&E is punishing the people of California for their lawsuits and suits, and covering itself for future lawsuits resulting from this massive outage. People are concerned that, rather than fix the problem, PG&E will fall back on regular massive power outages that not only disrupt people’s lives but also endanger many people, including elderly and disabled people who depend upon electrical power for their daily survival.

“Time for public takeover of PG&E!”

Despite strong critical reaction to the outage, PG&E maintained it was necessary to shut down power during peak heat and wind conditions to avoid wildfires. Several mayors and other elected officials have questioned the necessity and the size of the PG&E power shutdown; the mayor of Nevada City organized a “light parade” to protest the shut-off. State Sen. Jerry Hill from San Mateo called the shutdowns “excessive” and said, “PG&E clearly hasn’t made its system safe. These shutdowns are supposed to be surgical. But shutting down power to 800,000 people in 31 counties is by no means surgical.” (Los Angeles Times, Oct. 9)

Many people feel that PG&E is punishing the people of California for their lawsuits and suits, and covering itself for future lawsuits resulting from this massive outage. People are concerned that, rather than fix the problem, PG&E will fall back on regular massive power outages that not only disrupt people’s lives but also endanger many people, including elderly and disabled people who depend upon electrical power for their daily survival.

When 40,000 people took to the streets of San Francisco during the Sept. 20 climate strike, one of the planned stops was in front of the PG&E headquarters. In front of this large and well-fortified building, activists performed a skit documenting this utility company’s crimes against the people of California, exposing its corporate greed and indicting PG&E for its actions.

Close to 50 people held a vigil Oct. 11 outside PG&E’s office in Oakland. Most people agreed that PG&E should be held responsible for the wildfires and the danger of future wildfires caused by its refusal to spend the money to make its system safer.

Momentum is growing for a “public takeover” of PG&E. A Jan. 17 op-ed in Truthout by Johanna Bourne made a strong case for the state of California taking over PG&E and “creating a more democratic energy system.”

For more information:
Workers World Party launched a national campaign to demand “oil belongs to the people” and called for a worker takeover of the oil industry. It is time to raise a similar demand in the progressive and climate crisis movements for real workers’ and community control of the energy industry. This can only be fully accomplished if we join together to overturn this murderous, for-profit system and build a socialist system that will first and foremost focus on people’s needs.
First International Women’s Congress calls for unity and solidarity

The following is based on a slightly modified translation by Resumen Latinoamericano, published Sept. 21.

By Marco Teruggi

Caracas

The First International Women’s Congress for Peace and Solidarity among Peoples, held in Caracas (Sept. 19-21), assumed the historic role of giving direction to organizations from 23 countries from all over the world. The proposal and plans for the Congress stemmed from agreements to hold international events by sector reached at the São Paulo Forum, held in July in the Venezuelan capital.

It is one of the events in which sectors of the country conduct discussions, because within the framework of the Forum, topics are developed in a very collateral way. This allows us to carry out and fulfill our agreements,” explained Gladys Requena, vice president of the United Socialist Party of Venezuela (PSUV) — Women’s Sector, which promoted the organization of the Congress.

The First Congress held since the Forum. In August, the Workers’ Congress took place, and the Indigenous People’s Congress will be held soon.

“On the one hand, this is about developing discussion and organizing each social sector,” said Requena. “On the other hand, it is the risk to the country of the world with the revolutionary project and with the agreements aimed at condemning the policy of the imperial power that is being undertaken by U.S. imperialism against the people of Venezuela.”

Deciding to hold the Congress in Caracas was politically significant, as it was for the São Paulo Forum. “We are showing Venezuela that it is not alone, that the women of the world are following its cause and that we are here for the reality they are living. More importantly, we are here to tell the world why Venezuelan women are defending the process of the Bolivarian Revolution,” said Gloria Inés Ramirez Muñoz, vice president for Latin America and the Caribbean of the Women’s International Democratic Federation (FIDM).

Requena, representing Colombia, was present at the opening session, sharing the stage with other world leaders and representatives of the Venezuelan revolution’s political leadership, including Diosdado Cabello, president of the National Constituent Assembly. Also present on the stage was Walid Jumblatt from Lebanon, who is the coordinator of the José Martí Arab Latin American Solidarity Association and vice coordinator of the FIDM’s Arab region.

Ramírez Muñoz underscored the dimension of the common enemy: “All the peoples of the world who have been victims of the same imperialist violence, a people who know that adhering to this type of solidarity with fervor because no one wants any nation in the world to endure the tragedy that we in the Arab region have experienced as a result of all the plans implemented by the United States and Israel.”

Venezuelan women came from all states

“Five hundred Venezuelan women attended the Congress. They represent the different organizations of diverse political, territorial and state organizations: the PSUV, different Chavista [pro-government] parties, the Ministry of People’s Power for Women, the National Constituent Assembly, peasants, community members and women of the Bolivarian Militia. All participating were members of the Bolivarian Militia and military members of the Ministry of People’s Power for Defense, where an organization exists to address gender inequality.

There was nationwide representation, with women coming from all 24 states in the country. It made visible both the different expressions of women’s organizations and public policies. Ramírez Muñoz explained, “We are able to [offer] evidence about the situation of women’s rights because the government has implemented public policies to defend women’s rights.”

Requena, who served as minister for women and gender equality, highlighted this point: “The Bolivarian Government promotes public policies for women’s economic, political and social empowerment, as well as policies for the integral protection of women and that guarantee the lives of women and children — such as the right to breastfeed and humanized childbirth, two major programs that we are carrying out.”

Amidst the International Women’s Day, Colombia provided a forum where women could get acquainted with the policies developed during the years of the Chavista government and those which are being implemented during this period of siege.

Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro referred to this issue during a ceremony where he accompanied with Vice President Delcy Rodríguez and Requena. He emphasized the policies implemented by the national government to meet women’s needs from different sectors, including education and health, until children attend school.

‘War targets women’

Women are “the first ones to be impacted by war — in our bodies, in our territories and in our country,” said Ramírez Muñoz. “Women are part of the day-to-day construction of the social fabric of this society, and as such, the central target of wars in their different forms. In Colombia, where one of the main objectives is to build peace with social justice, this attack is expressed, for example, in the murders of social leaders and human rights leaders. Most of them are women.”

In Venezuela, Requena explained, a “multifaceted war is raging: Women have been targeted because of their key roles at home, in the countryside, in organizational processes, and in political and social mobilizations. Women play a central role in the popular sectors — organizing food distribution, building solidarity networks, [participating in] the Bolivarian Militia, mobilizing for electoral campaigns and [carrying out] political acts.”

She stressed that “the right wing in Venezuela and abroad, bourgeoisie and oligarchies, have identified that everything in Venezuela is [being] sustained on women’s shoulders. We are the political target. They seek to depress us and disconnect us from the Bolivarian project. We are a target of the imperial power because the U.S. empire has identified the mobilizing strength of women.”

We know how to resist’

“We have proven that we know how to resist and that we have an agenda for a counteroffensive,” continued Requena. “We have organized and are manufacturing friendly cloth diapers. We are sowing and manufacturing soaps, toothpastes, ecological toothpastes, counteroffensive,” continued Requena. “We have proven that we know how to resist and that we have an agenda for a counteroffensive,” continued Requena. “We have organized and are manufacturing friendly cloth diapers. We are sowing and manufacturing soaps, toothpastes, ecological toothpastes, eco-friendly cloth diapers. We are sowing and manufacturing soaps, toothpastes, ecological toothpastes, and potential for struggle.”

Ibrahim emphasized: “The U.S. policy of siege — as it is with their weapon of the economic blockade — is not only being implemented against Venezuela.” She explained that she brought her voice from Lebanon to the Middle East “to shake the hands of Venezuelan women and tell them we are with them. [We have a view] to develop a joint road map with them.”

“We need to coordinate actions,” stated Ibrahim. “The enemy is doing it. People who are struggling, people who have a cause, must coordinate their steps and yell at the same time and push in the same direction to reach our goal. The enemy cannot catch us divided and distressed. We have to understand each other and get closer.”

President Maduro affirmed that a joint road map is part of the government’s central policy. He delivered a draft of the final statement of the Congress opposing an open war against Venezuela — a threat that comes from both the diplomatic siege by the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance and from actions taken by the Colombian government and its elites.

Ibrahim concluded: “We are calling on Colombian and Venezuelan women and men not to fall into hatred and confrontation, but to strengthen and deepen our bonds of unity to resist our joint history and roots and to denounce what is taking place at the border — and condemn the paramilitary groups there, backed by the Colombian state.”

The International Women’s Congress is established to exchange and discuss for actions, debates and mobilizations within the current context, which is marked by major scenarios of conflict, joint [hostile] efforts and multiple common enemies.

Additional sources: Internationalist 360° (Sept. 22), Orinoco Tribune (Sept. 20 and Sept. 26).

Ecuador strike pushes back austerity

Continued from page 1

material and intellectual authors of the crisis, and in the revolution.”

According to CONAIE, since Oct. 2, some 10 people have been killed in confrontations with the army and police, 1,094 people have been arrested, and as many as 100 have been “disappeared.”

It is obvious from their words that the measurement of Ecuador’s oligarchy — not to mention its big bosses in the United States — prefer brutal repression to making any concessions to the workers and peasants of the country.

The government refused to recognize CONAIE’s demands to remove the two battalions of military police that cause perpetually to the level of repression and to end the state of emergency. The main demands of the thousands of Indigenous-led demonstrators have been forgotten; the fuel subsidy eliminated by Decree #883; end the state of emergency; down with the paquetazo; Lenin Moreno must go; end military and police aggression against Indigenous communities.

The government, however, has a deadline for the upcoming week in different parts of the country, mostly by first-hand or phone reports, show how the uprising progressed after the government tried to suppress it by force.

Ibarra and Imbabura province

Álvaro Castillo is the appointed governor of the province of Ibarra. On Thursday, Castillo nor the mayor of Ibarra welcomed thousands of Indigenous comuneros [members of Indigenous peoples acting collectively] of all ages who had marched for hours on Oct. 7 to deliver a manifesto to the governor.

On the other hand, Councilwoman Betty Romero and around 50 members of the local Revolución Ciudadana (Citizens’ Revolution) waited to greet the marchers with food and water as they entered the city.

Hundreds and hundreds of these same Indigenous marchers could be seen on Oct. 8 taking food and resting by the stream near the ger march of 6,000 people, completely unprecedented for Ibarra, before the agreement was announced. Bus and taxi traffic was halted around Cayambe, a city in an agricultural area 27 miles from Ibarra. The rural population around Cayambe is primarily Indigenous.

Armed forces from Yaguachi used extreme violence to repress the Indigenous Caranqui people who went into the streets to protect the Espeanza community.

Councilwoman Betty Romero of Ibarra called on all citizens to collect water and food to support besieged Espeanza, where some 1,000 people were reported to be in the streets yesterday. People have answered her call and delivered food aid to the people there.

Teardrop in Quito

Quito is the national capital and second-largest city of Ecuador, located high in the Andes Mountains. Already on Oct. 7, thousands of Indigenous people approaching Quito from the south encountered two armored vehicles blocking the highway at the Santa Rosa curve.
Part 2

Cuba, reforestation and the climate crisis

The following is Part 2 of a slightly edited talk given at a Workers World Party Forum on Oct. 3 in New York City. Hedgecoe participated in the 50th Venceremos Brigade this summer.

By Stephanie Hedgecoe

My subgroup of the brigade visited Las Terrazas [in the Sierra del Rosario Biosphere] July 28. We were joined by Ida, a local guide, and the village and then we visited the Río San Juan. The river is fed by sulfur springs, so it is regarded as a medicinal treatment. Las Terrazas and the river are both places of beauty that the people visit to enjoy on holidays. We were there during the national holidays, and we joined the many Cubans swimming in the river and enjoying the forest.

Las Terrazas: Model for reforestation projects

The village was built with piped water, power, schools, daycare centers, family doctor services, a clinic, and pharmacy. From the beginning, scientific workers, public service providers and artists joined the local people—and the project grew from there.

Villagers created a lake with fish farming, and some people raise livestock to provide meat. Las Terrazas has some solar power and plans to acquire more when possible. The village later added an eco-museum, a cinema and a disco, as Cubans are renowned for their love of film and music. They later decided to use their tourism profits to build a library.

Las Terrazas [the Sierra del Rosario project] became the model in Cuba for another 11 reforestation projects. UNESCO recognizes Cuba's reforestation programs for "principles of incorporation of knowledge and traditional practices to strengthen community involvement in strategic planning," and UNESCO has recognized five more Cuban biosphere to date.

The Sierra del Rosario Biosphere has regulations of conservation; the community is the first in the world to have a law protecting the defense of the Revolution (CDR), makes all decisions regarding sustainability, such as limits on further building and housing. The 11 other reforestation communities meet periodically at Las Terrazas to exchange indigenous seeds to promote biodiversity and food production.

Las Terrazas has three green gardens, which support the schools and community as the source of most of their food. [They also] provide [food] for seven eco-restaurants in the park. Villagers grow fruits, flowers and plants with medicinal uses for herbal infusions and vitamins.

Kindergarten children have their own garden, and they eat their own produce at lunch and at home. The children even learn to make floral infusions with various flowers, such as chamomile, guava, the guayabita fruit.

Ida, our guide, told us, "When I tell you it was mandatory to grow everything we needed, it was not because someone came and told us to do it. We need to do it. And we're doing our best to do it."

Some 7 million indigenous trees have been planted so far, and great biodiversity recovered, with over 800 species of plants. Scientists specialize for species of plants and animals in the forest daily, and twice a week they work with the local students to teach them to recognize the plants. Even small children know how to recognize six or seven local plants.

Impact of global warming in Cuba

Our guide talked about the impact of global warming on Cuba’s growing season and how they are struggling with it. Some varieties of plants have now disappeared from the forest due to the heat; others are in season earlier and longer, such as mangoes. This July was the warmest month ever recorded in the world. Ida told us the past average year-round temperature in Cuba was 24°C (75°F) to 77°F, but this year they had a new high of 39.8°C (103.6°F). Ida said the reforestation plan was focused on the environment from the beginning. She said when she was a child before the reforestation, the rains were so intense that children were forced to stay home from school sometimes for a week or two. Now there are seasonal rains that might last only three days.

The people of Las Terrazas live a rural life—one enriched by living in the peaceful, beautiful forest—but a cultural life very different from a rural life in most capitalist countries. Beyond free healthcare, education and clean water, the community in all decision-making, the focus on science and sustainability, and the organic food, like all Cubans they are focused on their minds and bodies.

In addition to the local musicians—one of whom, Polo Montañez, became world famous—Las Terrazas hosts a five-day music festival in tribute to the late Montañez, which is attended by people from all over Cuba and other countries. This village has a very enhanced cultural life.

Over the last few years, the villagers began to organize work to clean plastic and trash out of the rivers, where foreign tourists and tourists on vacationing Cubans have littered. Children are invited to join the work to clean up the trash. "In this way, their environmental consciousness is developed from a young age. Their CDR is currently working on keeping the number of tourists to the area within all limits of tourists in order to protect the environment, as a matter of sustainable limits.

Capitalist corporations poison waters

What city in the U.S. ever discusses sustainability? What corporation ever took account of that in its planning around mineral or fossil fuel extraction projects? None of them! They have left huge collection ponds of poisoned waters near shutdown mines that kill flocks of migratory birds. From the Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska, in the Arctic, to the BP spill in the Gulf, resource planning needs to be holistic—this is what forestry scientists have learned from working with Native forestry programs. The needs of the forests—the ecosystems—must be protected.

There is no planet B!

Capitalism is not sustainable—it is the death economy, it is the death culture! By its very nature, it cannot be made environmentally sustainable. For those of you who are new to environmentalism, when we speak of sustainability, we are speaking of the biosphere, of life on Earth. There is no planet B.

Big Oil needs to be nationalized and expropriated, and the infrastructure rebuilt as needed to move toward a sustainable living future. And we need to win scientists to a working-class, socialist program—they have the ability to help judge the best practices to rapidly transition away from fossil fuels will be sorely needed. Instead of personal choices, we need central planning that enables communities and nations to make collective choices, like Cuba does.

Stopping global warming also requires reforestation. Forests do more than clean the air of [excess] carbon. They protect soil, water, air, biodiversity, and they provide livelihoods. Despite decades under the illegal U.S. blockade, Cuba has done 50 years of reforestation work. Cuba protects its endangered species and works to restore indigenous ecosystems. Cuba only grows organic food. Despite proximity to Florida, Cuba’s coral reefs are much healthier than Florida’s. Cuba’s socialist planning centers on sustainability and enables the Cuban people to do all this. Revolutionary Cuba, despite the economic aggressions of imperialism, is a model for global warming.

Like Fidel said, like the Zapatistas say: “Another world is possible!”

Mimi Wicoff: Water is Life! Cuba! Stop Bloqueo No!

The ‘right to free speech’ vs. the right to sovereignty

By Monica Moorehead

The Houston Rockets are the most popular National Basketball Association team in China for one main reason: Yao Ming, the current president of the Chinese Basketball Association and an NBA Hall of Famer, played eight seasons for the Rockets. Basketball is very popular in China. Thanks to the Chinese national team and the NBA.

Daryl Morey, the white general manager of the Rockets, tweeted out seven words during the NBA’s season opener in Tokyo on Oct. 10. He wrote: “Fight for freedom, stand with Hong Kong.”

Those words were immediately deleted almost as fast as they were posted. Morey issued an apology after the Rockets’ owners publicly stated that they did not take political positions.

No matter, however, because the damage had already been done. The Chinese government stated that they were insulted and outraged over Morey’s comments. One has to examine the class nature of the Hong Kong protests to understand why. These protests have been pro-imperialist and pro-colonial, reflected by U.S. and Union Jack flags, which are totally reactionary and insulating toward China’s sovereignty and self-determination. There have even been visible signs asking for Trump to intervene by making Hong Kong a U.S. territory.

Morey’s tweet, suggesting that Hong Kong, a strategic center of global finance capital, should break away from mainland China, is blatant interference into China’s internal affairs.

The problem is, there are certain topics that are third-rail issues in certain countries, societies and communities. Such a separatist movement in a Chinese territory is one of those third-rail issues, not only for the Chinese government, but also for all citizens in China.

“The one thing that is terribly misunderstood, and often ignored by the Western press and those critical of China is that 1.4 billion Chinese citizens stand united when it comes to the territorial integrity of China and the country’s sovereignty over her homeland. This issue is non-negotiable.”

Tsai went on to explain how China was occupied by foreign powers such as Japan, Russia, Britain, France, United States, Germany, Italy and Austria-Hungary throughout the 20th century. The U.S.ication of Hong Kong liberated one-fourth of humanity in 1949.

The right of free speech is a phonory argument that not only deepens anti-communism, but also constantly ignores the human rights’ violations that occur every minute of every day inside the U.S. Sports commentators and other bourgeois punditst should not have the right to attack China, when historically and cur rently, the right to free speech has been granted to white supremacists and sexual abusers like Trump under the guise of protecting bourgeois democratic ideas.

What would a ‘People’s Impeachment’ look like?

By Makasi Motema

Our news cycle is dominated by one overwhelming story, all-encompassing story. Whatever million of people in the U.S. suffer without government coverage, while police in Texas make a habit of entering Black people’s homes and murdering them, and while our climate catastrophe looms, it is the palace intrigue of Trump’s White House that dominates the airwaves.

Commentators on cable news networks broadcast endless attacks on the former president of the ever-evolving scandal. But what does the discussion of Trump trading political capital for money have to do with receiving a cushy, unearned salary, have to do with the people?

Workers Party First Secretary Larry Holmes addresses the impeach ment story at an Oct. 10 New York City party meeting. He raised a salient but mostly misunderstood point: The nature of the impeachment investigation against Donald Trump is being conducted in such a way as to totally exclude the participa tion of the people.

There is nowhere for the people to vote, no issue behind which people can rally. The struggle is between attorneys in the U.S. court system and the hundreds of thousands of Black people in prison, the Trump administration’s loose use of regulations and the Obama administration’s loose use of regulations. Considering that the police have shown no signs that they will stop murdering in our streets, the Trump administration’s losing of regulations only seems likely to encourage them. What would Black people argue if they were asked to file articles of impeachment? What is a greater crime or misdemeanor— digging for dirt on Joe Biden or murdering Botham Jean? Donald Trump is one of the most openly bigoted presidents in recent U.S. history. He boasts about assaulting women. He is a base, odious, predatory monster who deserves to be removed from office— any office.

But a brutal revelation of anti-Semitism or crimes being committed against women, LGBTQ+, people of color, those with disabilities and all other members of the working class, both in the U.S. and abroad, go unmentioned by the spokespeople of the capitalist class. We should mark their attempts at exclusion and challenge them at every opportunity.

Change is essential! Build Workers World!

Workers World to salute the importance of change this month, then it’s time to join the Workers World Supporter Program, which since 1977 has helped put out the paper. Members receive a year’s subscription to WW, a monthly letter about timely issues and five free subscriptions to give to friends for a donation of $25, or $30 ($30, or $300 (only $25 a month). Workers World appreciates your generosity. Write to Workers World about changes in your life, your work, the neighborhood you live in. Write to us at 147 W. 24th St., 2nd Floor, New York, NY 10011. Or donate online at workers.org/donate/. It’s easy to set up monthly deductions. Know we’re grateful for your help in building Workers World— for today and for the future.
China eyewitness, Part 1

21st-century Shanghai thrives despite U.S. sanctions

By Sara Flounders and Michael Kramer

The writers, who traveled in three major cities in China—Shanghai, Nanjing and Beijing—from Sept. 24 to Oct. 4 on a personal trip, sent an informal travel log to Workers World newspaper. This is Part 1.

October 1, 2019, was the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People’s Republic of China. We were interested in visiting China during a time when there was a huge national celebration of what we consider an unprecedented accomplishment in human history: China has met the basic material needs of its 1.4 billion population. The lives and expectations of the average person have been transformed. This revolutionary accomplishment deserves to be applauded.

China’s 70th anniversary was also a time that countless signs, parade themes, TV programs and most of the messaging for the anniversary reminded people that it was the firm leadership of the Chinese Communist Party that made the transformation into a united, well-organized and modern but still developing society possible. That was the core message.

Another message was China’s 5,000-year history. For millennia it was one of the most advanced societies in culture, art and technology. This was continually raised to promote self-reliance and build modern socialism with Chinese characteristics.

We experienced two weeks of tremendous national pride. There was a great deal of discussion, everywhere that we could see, of what needed to be strengthened, what were the challenges and how to cope with still uneven development.

Siu Hin Lee, a Chinese activist who has worked with left cyberactivist delegations from China, was tireless in personally explaining and translating so much of this experience. Lee is national coordinator of the Action LA/National Immigrant Solidarity Network and the China-US Solidarity Network.

Communicating in China

Information technology has transformed China even faster than our internet links in the West. The great majority of people seem to always have their phones in hand. In China everyone uses the app WeChat for texting, calls, photos, videos, calling cabs, grocery shopping, metro fares and schedules, movie listings, exchanging contact information and discussion groups.

Literally every social and financial transaction needs only a phone tap. Huawei centers look much like Apple centers in the U.S. Large display tables of telecommunication equipment and consumer electronics, including the newest smartphones, are surrounded by hundreds of young shoppers comparing equipment.

China’s hosting of the 2008 Olympic Games, street signs, subway maps and numerous restaurant menus are also in English. More than 300 million people have studied and are English-language learners. English classes are now mandatory for all Chinese K-4 students.

By comparison, there are only 200,000 K-4 students learning Mandarin in the U.S., less than 0.4 percent. Only 20 percent of U.S. students study any world language. (U.S. News & World Report, Oct. 26, 2016)

We found lots of discussion groups and genuine interest in talking with U.S. leftists, especially now as U.S. corporate and political hostility increases every day.

It was not difficult to meet with people who have studied and traveled in the U.S. and have an awareness of its technological development, but have also seen firsthand the inequality and racism.

More than 4.5 million Chinese students have studied in Western universities. Currently there are 360,000 Chinese students studying in the U.S., although China graduates more students in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) from their own universities than the rest of the world combined. This sharp rise in exports of standards and expertise in a country where the overwhelming majority of the population was formerly illiterate is another source of national pride.

We met with a group of left cyberactivists who are interested in more left-leaning students in China. They are building toward socialism and are building toward socialism.

A lot is going on in environmental areas. We talked with the editor of a green paper in Beijing who is working with the Beijing City Friendship Association that has worked for decades to build friendly relations and exchanges. We had an evening discussion with a group of youth involved in the finance field, educated in the U.S. and working for big investment firms because they are expert math and software teachers. But they are also socially aware.

In order to better understand China’s revolutionary history we visited the site of the 1921 founding convention of the Chinese Communist Party in Shanghai; the Yuhua Revolutionary Martyrs Cemetery and Museum at Nanjing that highlighted the thousands of youth, aged 15 to 26, who died in the liberation struggle; and the Military and Revolution Museum in Beijing. All these sites were packed with large, excited delegations of the Communist Youth League. These were not stuffy or ignored museums.

Fundamental shift in U.S.-China relations

There have been countless exchanges with China for the last four decades, with U.S. corporate investors, government agencies, scientific researchers and think-tank academics. China wants to continue these exchanges. But powerful forces in the U.S., both Republicans and Democrats, are determined to exert heavy political, military and economic pressures on China to undermine state planning and state-owned industries.

U.S. hostility appears to most sharply undercut Chinese capitalists, who have benefited disproportionately from the past four decades of opening to Western investment. This is the one group who, in their own self-interest, might have been most willing to concede to U.S. trade demands.

Many people we met in China raised the significance of meeting us now. The new U.S. sanctions on the state-owned Chinese freight fleet Cargo Caraco—the largest in the world with more than 1,000 cargo ships and 100 supertankers—hit just after we arrived. These far-reaching sanctions, along with the escalating military threats going back to Obama’s military Asia Pivot, and now Trump’s trade war, confirm that U.S.-China relations are fundamentally shifting.

The increasingly violent U.S.-backed Hong Kong protests confirm this. The arrests of Chinese executives, and the purging of Chinese cancer research and other scientists working in U.S. universities, have sent out shock waves. The FBI “visits” to many Chinese students in the U.S. are dampening interest in studying here.

China’s 21st-century Shanghai

Shanghai—three times the size of New York City—is almost surreal and unbelievably modern on a grand scale. There is spectacular architecture. But what was most impressive was to be in such a dense city and see no litter or graffiti. We did see miles of new high-rise housing in every direction, always surrounded by parks.

Sixteen new subway lines, with hundreds of connecting stations, have been built in the last 20 years. The stations are beautifully designed, with escalators and elevators, clear signage, well-marked and clean connecting lines, staffed bathrooms in every station. In fact there were clean public bathrooms everywhere, usually within close walking distance, in the three cities we visited.

There were lots of funny videos on the metro trains, reinforcing passerby etiquette and safe conduct. We traveled mainly on the metro and quiet, smooth electric buses.

Being accustomed to seeing homeless and desperate people on almost every block in U.S. cities, this was not our experience in the streets, subways, plazas or many neighborhoods in China. We did find a huge variety of food shops, fruit stands, snack bars and coffee shops.

Unfortunately, there seem to be almost as many Starbucks here as in New York City. There are a total of 4,000 Starbucks in China and lots of other U.S. fast food chains.

Contradictions abound! Every corporate brand of clothes, shoes and designer items in the world seems to have flagship stores in big shopping malls and big ads in Shanghai and Beijing streets. Probably most of these goods are made in Chinese factories.

Consumerism on a grand scale is actually part of the national plan to raise the standard of living and consumption. Electric bikes are available everywhere with the tap of a phone. The stores, kiosks, markets, bakeries, cafes, local artisans, music venues and hangout places for youth are all socially encouraged and seem to have increased faster than subway lines.

But red flags and the red signs of the Revolution’s 70th anniversary were also everywhere.

In this new period, the strong focus is on totally ending poverty and providing a “moderately prosperous society for all.”

At this stage of development this does not mean equality. There are extremely wealthy multimillionaires in China. They are protected, even though they are monitored, along with a sustained policy of encouraging as much Western investment as possible. Yet Maoism is still a strong undercurrent of political life here. People often express a healthy suspicion about the current level of privilege.

China’s leaders are very careful to continually say this is not yet socialism, but is still face very uneven development. The focus is on improving interconnected and harmonious national planning.

Part 2: Beijing rocks to celebration of 70 years of revolution.
Not just a trade war U.S., NATO, Turkey out of Syria!

What’s really behind the difficult trade negotiations between the U.S. and People’s China? Is it—as the administration has claimed—that China wasn’t buying enough U.S. goods? Untrue, structurally! China has become a huge market for Midwestern farmers, who are heavily mortgage and rely on Beijing buying large quantities of their soybeans and other crops.

Soybean shipments did fall off a cliff in 2018, but in 2019 they staged a surprising recovery. If anything, soybean exports to China this year are running a little ahead of their 2017 rate.” (Mother Jones, Aug. 27) Nevertheless, the Trump administration, anxious over the coming elections, has tried to blame China for the farmers’ woes.

The Trumpites don’t admit that a big part of the farmers’ problem is due to climate change, with vast flooding over the past spring having turned Midwest fields into lakes. But according to Trumpspeak, climate change doesn’t exist.

The Trump administration, through its negotiations with China over trade, has been trying to obtain commitments from China to weaken state ownership in the parts of the economy that have been the underpinning of its progress.

Here’s how the most informed news outlet for the U.S. imperialist ruling class put it: “Trump launched the trade war against China with demands for sweeping structural reforms, but Beijing has indicated it is not willing to fundamentally change the way it controls China’s economy.” (New York Times, Oct. 10)

In other words, Trump’s trade negotiations have been about the desire of President Xi to hang onto socialized economic infrastructure. And the Chinese said no.

Washington then put pressure on Beijing by raising tariffs on Chinese imports. This has affected millions of people here, raising prices on a multitude of imported consumer goods that we have come to rely on.

Thus, the U.S. working class has been forced to pay for the Trump administration’s trade war and efforts to bring regime change to China.

As of this writing on Oct. 14, U.S. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin is saying that a deal is in the making. But nothing has been signed. And the stock markets are wary, given the administration’s past record of false promises.

This could be just another “smoke and mirrors” feint by the brutal gang in Washington to avoid triggering a market reaction.

The U.S. president has somehow become a peacemaker. Apparently as an electoral strategy, he has ordered the removal of a handful of U.S. troops from northern Syria. Simultaneously the Pentagon is sending 1,800 troops to the Saudi Arabian monarchy to defend the oil fields and continue the genocidal war in Yemen.

Turkey’s war crimes

Second, by sending troops to and arming puppet groups in northern Syria, the reactionary regime of President Recep Erdogan in Ankara, Turkey, is committing a war crime. This invasion is naked aggression against Turkey’s neighbor, Syria, the latest of many crimes committed against Syria in the last eight years. This aggression will cause additional suffering to the people of northeastern Syria, who are mainly Kurdish, but whose makeup reflects the many ethnic and religious groups that inhabit the whole of Syria.

Erdogan persecutes Turkey’s own Kurdish population, who are estimated to be 14 to 20 million of Turkey’s 80 million people. The Ankara regime has been using its army, especially in the Kurdish regions, in an attempt to crush the Kurdish people’s movement. Erdogan’s government persecutes opposition political parties and journalists throughout Turkey as it oppresses Turkey’s working class.

That Erdogan has taken some steps in the recent past that put him at odds with either the U.S. or the European Union—buying arms from Russia, participating in conferences with Russia and Iran to settle the war in Syria—should mislead no one into thinking the Turkish president represents any progressive tendency worldwide. Thieves, even those in the same gang, can have a falling out.

We do not at this time know the specifics of the agreement between the Kurdistan-based fighters in northern Syria and the legitimate Syrian government, nor can we foresee how it will play out. We applaud, however, any alliance that confronts a local hegemonic power like Turkey and, even more importantly, excludes the imperialist regimes of Europe and the United States, who are the primary oppressors of humanity worldwide.

Oct. 14, 2019

Indigenous Peoples’ Day!

Continued from page 1

with deliberate racism, that Columbus claimed— that China wasn’t buying enough U.S. goods? Untrue, structurally! China has become a huge market for Midwestern farmers, who are heavily mortgage and rely on Beijing buying large quantities of their soybeans and other crops.

Soybean shipments did fall off a cliff in 2018, but in 2019 they staged a surprising recovery. If anything, soybean exports to China this year are running a little ahead of their 2017 rate.” (Mother Jones, Aug. 27) Nevertheless, the Trump administration, anxious over the coming elections, has tried to blame China for the farmers’ woes.

The Trumpites don’t admit that a big part of the farmers’ problem is due to climate change, with vast flooding over the past spring having turned Midwest fields into lakes. But according to Trumpspeak, climate change doesn’t exist.

The Trump administration, through its negotiations with China over trade, has been trying to obtain commitments from China to weaken state ownership in the parts of the economy that have been the underpinning of its progress.

Here’s how the most informed news outlet for the U.S. imperialist ruling class put it: “Trump launched the trade war against China with demands for sweeping structural reforms, but Beijing has indicated it is not willing to fundamentally change the way it controls China’s economy.” (New York Times, Oct. 10)

In other words, Trump’s trade negotiations have been about the desire of President Xi to hang onto socialized economic infrastructure. And the Chinese said no.

Washington then put pressure on Beijing by raising tariffs on Chinese imports. This has affected millions of people here, raising prices on a multitude of imported consumer goods that we have come to rely on.

Thus, the U.S. working class has been forced to pay for the Trump administration’s trade war and efforts to bring regime change to China.

As of this writing on Oct. 14, U.S. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin is saying that a deal is in the making. But nothing has been signed. And the stock markets are wary, given the administration’s past record of false promises.

This could be just another “smoke and mirrors” feint by the brutal gang in Washington to avoid triggering a market reaction.

The U.S. president has somehow become a peacemaker. Apparently as an electoral strategy, he has ordered the removal of a handful of U.S. troops from northern Syria. Simultaneously the Pentagon is sending 1,800 troops to the Saudi Arabian monarchy to defend the oil fields and continue the genocidal war in Yemen.

Turkey’s war crimes

Second, by sending troops to and arming puppet groups in northern Syria, the reactionary regime of President Recep Erdogan in Ankara, Turkey, is committing a war crime. This invasion is naked aggression against Turkey’s neighbor, Syria, the latest of many crimes committed against Syria in the last eight years. This aggression will cause additional suffering to the people of northeastern Syria, who are mainly Kurdish, but whose makeup reflects the many ethnic and religious groups that inhabit the whole of Syria.

Erdogan persecutes Turkey’s own Kurdish population, who are estimated to be 14 to 20 million of Turkey’s 80 million people. The Ankara regime has been using its army, especially in the Kurdish regions, in an attempt to crush the Kurdish people’s movement. Erdogan’s government persecutes opposition political parties and journalists throughout Turkey as it oppresses Turkey’s working class.

That Erdogan has taken some steps in the recent past that put him at odds with either the U.S. or the European Union—buying arms from Russia, participating in conferences with Russia and Iran to settle the war in Syria—should mislead no one into thinking the Turkish president represents any progressive tendency worldwide. Thieves, even those in the same gang, can have a falling out.

We do not at this time know the specifics of the agreement between the Kurdistan-based fighters in northern Syria and the legitimate Syrian government, nor can we foresee how it will play out. We applaud, however, any alliance that confronts a local hegemonic power like Turkey and, even more importantly, excludes the imperialist regimes of Europe and the United States, who are the primary oppressors of humanity worldwide.

Not just a trade war U.S., NATO, Turkey out of Syria!

The conflict within the U.S. ruling class about the Turkish invasion of northern Syria has created some confusion about events there. The latest new development—an alliance of Kurdish-based forces with the Syrian national army to defend the border from the Turkish army—may increase that confusion. To clarify the situation as best as possible, we need to state some basic positions and underline some basic facts.

First of all, U.S. imperialism never had, never has and never will have any legitimate “humanitarian” reason to station troops anywhere in Syria. Washington places troops in areas for strategic advantage and/or for economic domination. The reason U.S. troops have been in Syria and elsewhere in the region is for U.S. oil monopolies to control and exploit the natural resources—mainly fossil fuels, oil and gas—so the capitalist owners of these companies can get richer.

For the last eight years, U.S. arms and political influence, and those of other NATO countries, have fed a brutal war that has torn apart Syria, causing the death of hundreds of thousands of Syrian people. This war has also made as many as 10 million Syrians refugees, many within Syria or in neighboring countries and some in Europe. The U.S. goal was to remove the sovereign Syrian government and replace it with a puppet of Western imperialism in power.

In Libya, for example, in 2011 the imperialists succeeded in removing a legitimate government and replaced it with an unstable horror.

Nothing good has come or will come from the presence of U.S. troops, nor from political domination by U.S. imperialism. No one should believe that the racist, misogynist and xenophobic U.S. president has somehow become a peacemaker. Apparently as an electoral strategy, he has ordered the removal of a handful of U.S. troops from northern Syria. Simultaneously the Pentagon is sending 1,800 troops to the Saudi Arabian monarchy to defend the oil fields and continue the genocidal war in Yemen.

Turkey’s war crimes

Second, by sending troops to and arming puppet groups in northern Syria, the reactionary regime of President Recep Erdogan in Ankara, Turkey, is committing a war crime. This invasion is naked aggression against Turkey’s neighbor, Syria, the latest of many crimes committed against Syria in the last eight years. This aggression will cause additional suffering to the people of northeastern Syria, who are mainly Kurdish, but whose makeup reflects the many ethnic and religious groups that inhabit the whole of Syria.

Erdogan persecutes Turkey’s own Kurdish population, who are estimated to be 14 to 20 million of Turkey’s 80 million people. The Ankara regime has been using its army, especially in the Kurdish regions, in an attempt to crush the Kurdish people’s movement. Erdogan’s government persecutes opposition political parties and journalists throughout Turkey as it oppresses Turkey’s working class.

That Erdogan has taken some steps in the recent past that put him at odds with either the U.S. or the European Union—buying arms from Russia, participating in conferences with Russia and Iran to settle the war in Syria—should mislead no one into thinking the Turkish president represents any progressive tendency worldwide. Thieves, even those in the same gang, can have a falling out.

We do not at this time know the specifics of the agreement between the Kurdistan-based fighters in northern Syria and the legitimate Syrian government, nor can we foresee how it will play out. We applaud, however, any alliance that confronts a local hegemonic power like Turkey and, even more importantly, excludes the imperialist regimes of Europe and the United States, who are the primary oppressors of humanity worldwide.
Women-led march invaded Fort Dix to free rebellious GIs

By John Catalinotto

The following text is Part 2 of a report on the Fort Dix Stockade rebellion of June 5, 1969 (Part 1 was published in World Socialist Website World View Forum, July 1969), which tells the story of the American Servicemen’s Union, an anti-war, anti-racist organization of U.S. active duty GIs on leave or AWOL from 1966-75. ASU members faced some of the heaviest charges at Fort Dix.

In the aftermath of the rebellion that burned down part of the stockade, 38 of the troops imprisoned there faced heavy charges, including Oscar Klug, facing more than 50 years in prison. In the summer of 1969, the popular mood in the country was turning decisively against the war in Vietnam. This was a key development in the movement to free the Fort Dix 38.

With the supporters of these revolutionary anti-war troops build a movement that was both broad and militant and do it in time to keep them from being imprisoned? During the summer of 1969, the ASU, the Fort Dix anti-war coffeehouse — a part of a national movement that supported anti-war troops — Students for a Democratic Society, Youth Against War & Fascism, the Rainbow Coalition and the Committee to Free the Fort Dix 38 all began to start organizing for a mass movement to free the stockaders at Fort Dix. The Rainbow Coalition then included the Black Panther Party and the Young Lords (a recently founded Puerto Rican organization). And other organizations that had mainly white membership.

Then something happened that gave this demonstration a special direction. The movement for women’s liberation had been developing in the population as a whole, along with the overall rebellious sentiment of 1969 and 1970, led by the Black Liberation Movement. The drive for women’s liberation was even more intense among women in the anti-war and other movements, women who considered themselves revolutionaries, than it was in the general population.

With them by their side, men, it was hard for women to play a leading role within the ASU or similar organizations. On the other hand, there was nothing stopping women from leading the demonstration of civilians at Fort Dix — except tradition. The women working with the ASU, especially if they were in Workers World Party — who at that time included Sue Davis, Laurie Fierstein and Maryann Weissman — were quite ready to break tradition’s chains.

The Stockade prisoners, many of them opponents in some way of the U.S. war against Vietnam, took up in response to the provocations of the stockade authorities and burned down part of the stockade. The Army sent in 250 military police, who beat the prisoners and arrested 38 of the rebellious soldiers, finally charging them with serious crimes that could lead to decades in military prison.

The following report is adapted from a chapter in John Catalinotto’s book, “The Guns Around: Maritines, Soldier Rebel, Youth Against War & Fascism, the Rainbow Coalition and the first day of the February Revolution in 1917 Russia (both histories are included in “Turn the Guns Around”), at the Fort Dix protest women and leaders also played the role. In the earlier examples, the interaction between the rebellious women and the potentially rebellious troops played a key role in sparking revolution. In 1969 the drive to organize the troops in a union had a similar goal, even if it failed to reach that intense level.

The marchers moved forward eight abreast and the line stretched back as far as you could see. It was Oct. 12, 70 miles south of New York City at Fort Dix, N.J. There were maybe 10,000 people, men and women.

“They marched past the gas stations, houses and hamburger stands of Wrightstown toward Fort Dix, chanting in an angry roar their demands for freeing jailed GIs and ending the war.”

“The 38, who were called the Moratorium in cities all over the country. No longer isolated in New York, Washington and San Francisco, the movement was reaching the interior. More than a million people around the country walked away from their workplaces, mostly during lunch hour or before closing time, wearing black armbands to show their opposition to the war in Vietnam. A month later, on Nov. 15, in Washington, D.C., between a quarter million and a half million people gathered for what was the largest single action against the war up to that time. Within that massive crowd, there was a more revolutionary contingent of maybe 10,000 mainly young people, who left the main group to surround the Justice Department, where, according to later reports, they terrorized Attorney General John Mitchell.

Courts martial at Fort Dix

Judging by how they treated most of the Fort Dix 38, the Army knew it was facing trouble if it came down too hard on the GIs. But they still could single out those they suspected of being leaders. The struggle to free the GIs had to continue both by organizing their legal defense and what there was was a trial.

The Workers Defense League and the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee handled most of the cases. Even before the demonstration, 26 of the defendants had received special courts-martial, with 22 acquitted. The first four received sentences between four and six months. Three of the defendants somehow escaped and disappeared.

Five of the soldiers most closely associated with the ASU faced general courts-martial with potentially much heavier charges. Their sentences had little to do with actual proof of guilt. Jeff Russell was found guilty of rioting and received a sentence of three years in prison. Tom Catlow was found guilty, but was sentenced only to a half year’s dishonorable discharge. William Brakefield got three years at hard labor and Carlos Rodriguez Torres two years.

In Klug’s case, the prosecution strategy depended on frightening the defendants with very heavy charges and getting them to give testimony against each other as the way to reduce the charges. The prosecution would lie, saying, “So and so ratted you out already. Why should you take the whole rap? Give evidence against him.”

“People’s Army Invades Dix, Demands Freedom for GIs”

The protest at Fort Dix was part of a wave of anti-war demonstrations in the fall of 1969. On Oct. 12, an action called “The Moratorium in cities all over the country. No longer isolated in New York, Washington and San Francisco, the movement was reaching the interior. More than a million people around the country walked away from their workplaces, mostly during lunch hour or before closing time, wearing black armbands to show their opposition to the war in Vietnam. A month later, on Nov. 15, in Washington, D.C., between a quarter million and a half million people gathered for what was the largest single action against the war up to that time. Within that massive crowd, there was a more revolutionary contingent of maybe 10,000 mainly young people, who left the main group to

Women in anti-imperialist organizations took the leadership of the march on Fort Dix to demand freedom for soldiers who rebelled inside the stockade.

The protest at Fort Dix was part of a wave of anti-war demonstrations in the fall of 1969. On Oct. 12, an action called “The Moratorium in cities all over the country. No longer isolated in New York, Washington and San Francisco, the movement was reaching the interior. More than a million people around the country walked away from their workplaces, mostly during lunch hour or before closing time, wearing black armbands to show their opposition to the war in Vietnam. A month later, on Nov. 15, in Washington, D.C., between a quarter million and a half million people gathered for what was the largest single action against the war up to that time. Within that massive crowd, there was a more revolutionary contingent of maybe 10,000 mainly young people, who left the main group to ¿Por qué la victoria del movimiento indigenista no es total?

Por Marco Teruggi
Quito, Ecuador

Publicado en pagina2.com.ar, el 15 de octubre.

Hay celebraciones en Ecuador. Comenzaron el domingo por la noche cuando el gobierno nacional y el movimiento indígena centralmente agrupado en la Coordinadora de Nacionalidades Indígenas de Ecuador (CONAIE) anunciaron haber llegado a un acuerdo respecto al decreto 883, que culminó el lunes con la decisión de inmediata marcha de movilizaciones en Quito y en los bloques de protesta de la ciudad y de algunos municipios.

¿Existía la posibilidad de lograr una victoria mayor? Esa pregunta reúne los principales interrogantes. Según quienes protagonizaron las jornadas, es decir la CONAIE, no lo había. Y las movilizaciones, si bien no fueron únicamente del movimiento indígena, recayeron principalmente en su capacidad de acción, tanto en Quito como en los bloques de carreteras en el país.

De esta manera se logró una victoria parcial dentro del conjunto de medidas acordadas entre el gobierno y el Fondo Monetario Internacional, siendo el decreto 883 el de mayor impacto en la economía y en la batalla simbólica. El resultado final de esa parcialidad dependerá del nuevo decreto acordado.

El despliegue persecutorio comenzó el lunes contra Afganistán.

El I Congreso Internacional de Mujeres en la ciudad de Caracas, Venezuela, 19-21 de septiembre.

El crimen contra Afganistán

Es la guerra más larga de los Estados Unidos. Y nadie en el establecimiento imperialista estadounidense en el poder puede explicar por qué continúa.

Antes de que Trump afirmara recientemente que estaba por retirar al menos algunos de los miles de soldados estadounidenses en Afganistán, los presidentes estadounidenses, demócratas y republicanos anteriores hicieron promesas simi-laras. Pero la ocupación estadounidense nunca terminó.

Cerca de 15 mil jóvenes estadounidenses han muerto y miles han sido gravemente heridos allí. Algunos sobre-vivientes comienzan a hacer preguntas sobre por qué fueron enviados a Afganistán en primer lugar.

Muchos, muchos más afganos han sufrido un destino aún peor en esta guerra desigual, incluidos bebés, niños pequeños, fiestas de bodas y agricultores que trabajan en sus campos. Las minas terres-trapes están en todas partes. Los aviones no tripulados en Afganistán, incapaces de distinguir la diferencia entre una fiesta de bodas y una reunión de combate, son convocados para atacar aéreos asesinos desde bases desde el oeste de los Estados Unidos hasta el propio Afganistán.

La guerra ha costado a los contribuyen-
tes estadounidenses más de un billón de dólares. Su costo para el pueblo afgano es incalculable.

¿Por qué empezó? ¡Porque la clase domi-
nante de los Estados Unidos no podía soportar el hecho de que en 1978, hace más de 40 años — una revolución tuvo éxito en Afganistán, liderada por un partido progresista que era amigo de la Unión Soviética.

La revolución fue precipitada por el hecho de que Nur Muhammad Taraki, líder del Partido Democrático Popular de Afganistán, había sido escarceado por un gobierno reaccionario respaldado por los Estados Unidos. En respuesta al arresto de Taraki, los soldados y trabajadores de base derrumbaron las puertas de la cárcel y lo liberaron, lo que comenzó el fin del gobierno favorecido por Washington.

Después, un gobierno reaccionario encabezado por el PDPA duró poco más de una década. Pero en ese corto tiempo, abolió la deuda de los campesinos con los terratenientes ricos, distribuyó tierras a los campesinos y estableció granjas colectivas, estableció escuelas para niños y niñas, eliminó el “precio de la novia” y declaró la igualdad de derechos para las mujeres, entre otras reformas.

En ese momento, la Guerra Fría con la Unión Soviética era la prioridad para Washington. Entonces, dentro de un año de la revolución progresiva afgana, Estados Unidos estaba planeando su desroce.

En la madrugada del lunes fue detenida en su casa la prefecta de Pichincha, Paola Pachón, y en la madrugada fue allanada la casa del ex asambleísta Virgilio Hernández.

Estos arrestos y persecuciones a través de poder judicial articulado a la condena mediática se sumaron a casos anteriores, como el del ex vicepresidente Jorge Glas, el del ex canciller Ricardo Patiño, refugiado en México, y del mismo Correa.

De esta manera Ecuador avanza sobre varios tiempos en simultáneo: el de la celebración de la victoria parcial de la CONAIE, y la movilización popular que duró once días, el de la persecución al corrompido como parte del ataque político de la Conaie, y la del mismo gobierno que debió ceder sobre el decreto 883, pero que busca cómo no modificarlo sustancialmente.

Dentro de ese cuadro se destaca un elemento de mayor complejidad: las diferencias entre una parte de la dirección de la CONAIE y el corrompido, que llevan varios años, fueron resueltas vía Twitter durante los días de protesta, y quedan en primer plano durante el diálogo en el momento en que el gobierno presentó la CONAIE Jaime Vargas armó frente a la Revolución Ciudadana.

Ecuador, que amanece hoy en su primer día con descompresión de las movilizaciones, vive un escenario complejo. El gobierno de Moreno no se detendrá en su intento de neoliberalización de la economía que tiene en el FMI un punto de pro-fundización, así como en su alineamiento con Estados Unidos como epicentro de su política exterior. ¿Cuáles serán los próximos pasos de la CONAIE? ¿Qué hará el corrompido ante la persecución política? Las piezas están en movimiento.

El I Congreso Internacional de Mujeres en la ciudad de Caracas, Venezuela, 19-21 de septiembre.

Correspondencia sobre artículos en Workers World/Mundo Obrero pueden ser enviadas a: WW-MundoObrero@workers.org

Mundo Obrero

éditorial

Es la guerra más larga de los Estados Unidos. Y nadie en el establecimiento imperialista estadounidense en el poder puede explicar por qué continúa.

Antes de que Trump afirmara recientemente que estaba por retirar al menos algunos de los miles de soldados estadounidenses en Afganistán, los presidentes estadounidenses, demócratas y republicanos anteriores hicieron promesas simi-

laras. Pero la ocupación estadounidense nunca terminó.

Cerca de 15 mil jóvenes estadounidenses han muerto y miles han sido gravemente heridos allí. Algunos sobre-vivientes comienzan a hacer preguntas sobre por qué fueron enviados a Afganistán en primer lugar.

Muchos, muchos más afganos han sufrido un destino aún peor en esta guerra desigual, incluidos bebés, niños pequeños, fiestas de bodas y agricultores que trabajan en sus campos. Las minas terres-trapes están en todas partes. Los aviones no tripulados en Afganistán, incapaces de distinguir la diferencia entre una fiesta de bodas y una reunión de combate, son convocados para atacar aéreos asesinos desde bases desde el oeste de los Estados Unidos hasta el propio Afganistán.

La guerra ha costado a los contribuyen-
tes estadounidenses más de un billón de dólares. Su costo para el pueblo afgano es incalculable.

¿Por qué empezó? ¡Porque la clase domi-
nante de los Estados Unidos no podía soportar el hecho de que en 1978, hace más de 40 años — una revolución tuvo éxito en Afganistán, liderada por un partido progresista que era amigo de la Unión Soviética.

La revolución fue precipitada por el hecho de que Nur Muhammad Taraki, líder del Partido Democrático Popular de Afganistán, había sido escarceado por un gobierno reaccionario respaldado por los Estados Unidos. En respuesta al arresto de Taraki, los soldados y trabajadores de base derrumbaron las puertas de la cárcel y lo liberaron, lo que comenzó el fin del gobierno favorecido por Washington.

Luego, un gobierno reaccionario encabezado por el PDPA duró poco más de una década. Pero en ese corto tiempo, abolió la deuda de los campesinos con los terratenientes ricos, distribuyó tierras a los campesinos y estableció granjas colectivas, estableció escuelas para niños y niñas, eliminó el “precio de la novia” y declaró la igualdad de derechos para las mujeres, entre otras reformas.

En ese momento, la Guerra Fría con la Unión Soviética era la prioridad para Washington. Entonces, dentro de un año de la revolución progresiva afgana, Estados Unidos estaba planeando su desroce. La CIA armó y financió en secreto un intento de contrarevolución dirigido por terratenientes desposeídos.

Esto atrajo a la URSS, un aliado del gobierno de Taraki, al conflicto.

Ese fue el origen de la guerra de Estados Unidos en Afganistán, que continúa hasta nuestros días, a pesar de que la URSS se ha ido hace mucho tiempo.

Washington afirma hoy que es por los derechos de las mujeres en Afganistán, y permanece allí para proteger a la gente contra las fuerzas reaccionaristas islamistas. ¡Es eso un hipótesis! Forklifts to EE. UU. Los que empeñaron esas fuerzas en primer lugar, para usarlas contra la URSS.

Igualmente monstruoso es el historial de los poderosos medios capitalistas de EE. UU., que continúan suprimiendo el conocimiento del papel real de Washington en Afganistán y en cambio, presentan al Pentágono y a todos sus contratistas altamente remunerados como un instrumento para el progreso.

Es hora de revelar la verdad y poner fin a 40 años de la guerra de Estados Unidos contra Afganistán.