Afghanistan: New U.S. sanctions threaten mass hunger

By Sara Flounders

Aug. 23 — U.S. politicians and journalists are all feigning deep concern about leaving behind tens of thousands of Afghans who worked for them. Meanwhile, U.S. financial institutions are busy planning a tremendous crisis for all Afghans, including their loyal collaborators.

The cynical decision to seize all of Afghanistan’s assets is reported in the back pages of the business and financial news. The media calculates the effects of these plans as “crash-producing.” Plunging currency, hyperinflation and soaring food prices are the immediate predicted effects. An orchestrated famine on a devastating level is in the planning stages.

According to the Aug. 14 Voice of America: “Afghan people are facing both an artificial and natural disaster, rendering them unable to feed their families. The situation has all the hallmarks of a humanitarian catastrophe.”

U.S. imperialism has tried many ruthless tactics to sustain a position of military dominance in Central Asia. Afghanistan has borders with China, Iran and the former Soviet Republics bordering Russia. Imperialist strategists have considered Afghanistan a key piece in the “Great Game” among competing powers for over 150 years.

At the height of the most recent imperialist intervention, in 2010 the U.S. and dozens of NATO and “partner”-compliant countries deployed more than 130,000 troops in 2010 the U.S. and dozens of NATO and “partner”-compliant countries deployed more than 130,000 troops on 400 military bases, forward operating bases and combat outposts around Afghanistan and built 300 bases for Afghan puppet forces. (CBS News, Feb. 10, 2010)

Over the last 20 years, U.S. involvement in Afghanistan has generated images of brutalized captives, secret prisons, sexual violence, enforced disappearances and random killings. There have been hundreds of drone strikes, targeted assassinations, and calculated crime against humanity. Depriving civilians of access to food or targeting civilians in a systematic policy that causes suffering and death is defined in international law as a Crime Against Humanity.

The U.S. is now leveraging its last measure of control to inflict maximum damage. This is not a by-product of the confusion of war. This is an enforced and calculated crime against humanity. Depriving civilians of access to food or targeting civilians in a systematic policy that causes suffering and death is defined in international law as a Crime Against Humanity.

The disarray is on display at Kabul Airport for the whole world to view. But U.S. corporate and banking powers still have formidable power in their hands. The next U.S. weapon is intentional starvation.

90% live below poverty level

Even Afghan President Mohammed Ashraf Ghani, a totally corrupt politician who fled Afghanistan in a plane so stuffed with cash that skids of cash were left sitting on the tarmac, warned last year that 90% of Afghans already live below the government-determined poverty level of $2 a day. (TOLONews, July 20, 2020)

New York Times reporter Alan Rappeport, in one of several articles in the business section on the coming U.S. squeeze, wrote: “The United States and the international community are already shutting the flow of money, leaving Afghanistan in the stranglehold of sanctions that were designed to cut the Taliban off from the global financial system. Analysts say the looming shock threatens to amplify a humanitarian crisis in a country that has already endured years of war.”

Rappeport quotes Justin Sandefur, a senior fellow at the Center for Global Development, who said of cutting access to all funds, “In the short term, it’s potentially catastrophic … could inflict real pain on normal people.” (New York Times, July 23)

Treasury Department officials confidently assert that the Biden administration is working to prevent the Taliban from getting any of Afghanistan’s money.

The squeeze

The U.S. has blocked access to Afghanistan’s nearly $9.5 billion in the Afghan’s Central Bank’s assets. The money is held in the New York Federal Reserve and other U.S.-based financial institutions. (Al-Jazeera, Aug. 18)

The International Monetary Fund suspended plans to distribute more than $460 million in emergency reserves to the country. The IMF is funded with contributions by its 190 member nations; however, the United States is the largest shareholder and has always controlled the institution since it was established in 1944.

The $1.2 billion held in funds in euros and British pounds and by the Swiss-based Bank for International Settlements are also frozen. Funds from the agreement in November 2020 among six countries to send $1.2 billion over four years for emergency relief to Afghanistan are frozen. Germany has frozen its funds. All the imperialist countries are participating in the financial squeeze.

Even Afghanistan’s share of a $650 billion allocation of currency reserves known as Special Drawing Rights (SDRs), to help developing countries cope with the coronavirus pandemic, is frozen.

The U.S. government doesn’t need any fresh authority

Continued on page 8

Oakland vs highway patrol
Free Alex Saab!
Black trans lives matter
Houselessness and opioid crisis
Nat Turner lives
Labor Day for unorganized workers
Mumia on Afghanistan
Newark, NJ, for Cuba

Editorial
You’ve heard it all before

2 3 4 7 7 8 8

Special Section

3-7

Attica, Puerto Rico & Young Lords
Minister King X: Charges dropped
Disability rights and justice
Commemorating Black August

Portland, Ore.

U.S. and Haiti 9 Rain in Greenland? 9 Kenya’s communist women 9

China compartevacunas 10

Follow us! @WorkersWorld
www.WorkersWorld.org

5-7

SNACK STRIKE!

ON STRIKE NABISCO
Bakers Union Local 384
Bakers, Confectioners, & Food Workers International
ON STRIKE NABISCO
Bakers Union Local 384
Bakers, Confectioners, & Food Workers International

Tear Down the Walls

Disability rights and justice
Commemorating Black August

George Jackson
Community demands Highway Patrol out of Oakland, Justice for Erik Salgado

By Judy Greenspan
Oakland, Calif.

Community organizations and family members of Erik Salgado, killed by the California Highway Patrol in East Oakland in June 2020, held a press conference here Aug. 16 to oppose plans to use the CHP to enforce traffic laws in Oakland. Oakland Mayor Libby Schaaf and California Gov. Gavin Newsom have proposed those plans.

Held on the street corner where Salgado was killed, the press conference became a speak-out by family members and groups opposed to police murder and terror in this community. Their rallying call: “CHP out of Oakland!”

Cat Brooks opened by calling out Mayor Schaaf for bringing the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives; the FBI; and now the CHP into the city in the last three weeks. “As Black, Brown and Indigenous people, she said, “we know that these law enforcement agencies do not mean safety for our community. In fact, they mean increased levels of violence and increased danger for our bodies.” Brooks is co-founder of the Anti Police-Terror Project and executive director of Justice Teams Network.

Brooks described the police attack on Salgado and his pregnant partner: “On this street corner, Erik and his girlfriend were in their car, when they were profiled, targeted and assaulted by the California Highway Patrol, resulting in the death of Erik Salgado and his unborn child. Libby Schaaf has done nothing to support that family and their quest for justice.”

Ben Wang, co-director of the Asian Prisoner Support Committee, explained why his organization is calling for “CHP Out of Chinatown; CHP Out of Oakland.” Wang described the education and advocacy his group has been doing for the past 20 years on behalf of Asian prisoners in California. “We do not want the mayor and other elected officials to divide us further. We know that more policing, more law enforcement, more militarization does not solve any of the real issues,” Wang concluded.

Salgado’s sister Amanda Blanco said, “I am here, a year later, still fighting for answers for my brother’s case. … I am confused about why the request for more CHP, with blood already on their hands. … From Oakland on Hayward there is already too much police presence.”

A broad coalition of Oakland community organizations including APTP, Communities United for Restorative Youth Justice, Oakland Rising, East Bay Alliance for a Sustainable Economy, Asian Pacific Environmental Network, AAJP Women Lead, Urban Peace Movement and AFSC supported the press conference.

The coalition issued a press release which emphasized that removing the CHP from Oakland’s streets was a key demand of last year’s uprising, which was a reaction to the police murders of George Floyd in Minneapolis and Breonna Taylor in Louisville, Ky.

Workers World Party is a revolutionary Marxist-Leninist party inside the belly of the imperialist beast. We are a multiracial, multigender, and multigenerational organization that not only aims to abolish capitalism, but to build a socialist society because it’s the only way forward!

Capitalism and imperialism threaten the peoples of the world and the planet itself in the neocolonial quest for ever-greater profits.

Capitalism means war and austerity, racism and repression, attacks on immigrants, struggles for LGBTQ+ oppression and mistreatment of people with disabilities. It means jobslessness, increasing homelessness and impoverishment and lack of hope for the future. No social problems can be solved under capitalism.

The U.S. is the richest country in the world, yet no one has a guaranteed right to shelter, food, water, health care, education and anything else—unless they can pay for it.

The ruthless ruling class today seeks to wipe out decades of gains and benefits won by hard-fought struggles by people’s movements. The super-rich and their political representatives have intensified their attacks on the multinational, multigender and multigenerational working class. It is time to point the blame at—and challenge—the capitalist system.

WWP fights for socialism because the working class produces all wealth in society, and this wealth should remain in their hands, not be stolen in the form of capitalist profits. The wealth workers create should be socially owned and its distribution planned to satisfy and guarantee basic human needs.

Since 1959, Workers World Party has been out in the streets defending the workers and oppressed here and worldwide. If you’re interested in Marxism, socialism and fighting for a socialist future, please contact a WWP branch near you.

Mundo Obrero: Teresa Gutierrez, Carlos Vargas

Contributing Editors: LeiLani Dowell, G. Dunkel, K. Durkin, Sara Flounders, Teresa Gutierrez, Joshua Hanks, Makasi Motema, Gloria Rubac

Workers World 147 W. 24th St., 2nd Fl.
New York, NY 10011
Phone: 212.627.2994
E-mail: ww@workers.org
Web: www.workers.org

Vol. 63, No. 34 • August 26, 2021
Closing date: August 25
Editors: John Catalinotto, Martha Grevatt, Deirdre Griswold, Monica Moorehead, Betsey Ptite, Minnie Bruce Pratt

Web Editors: Al Reay, Harvey Markowitz, Janet Mayes

Periodicals postage paid at New York, N.Y.

147 W. 24th St., 2nd Fl.
New York, NY 10011.

Workers World (ISSN-1070-4205) is published monthly by WW Publishers, 147 W. 24th St., 2nd Fl., New York, NY 10011. Back issues and individual articles are available on microfilm and/ or photocopy from NA Publishing, Inc. P.O. Box 998, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-1998.

A searchable archive is available on the Web at www.workers.org.

A Deadline digest is available via e-mail subscription. Subscription information is at workers.org. Periodicals postage paid at New York, N.Y. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Workers World, 147 W. 24th St. 2nd Fl., New York, NY 10011.
Alex Saab’s letter: No retreat, no surrender!

The Venezuelan Special Envoy to Iran, Alex Saab, reiterated his call for justice, through a letter received through his lawyers, one day before the case was to be heard again in the Constitutional Court of Cape Verde on August 13.

Alex Saab was pulled off a plane on June 12, 2020, during a refueling stop in the Republic of Cape Verde, an island nation off Africa's West Coast. U.S. authorities, in violation of international law, had ordered his arrest.

At the time of his seizure, Saab, a Venezuelan diplomat, was on a humanitarian mission to Iran to arrange emergency shipments of food, medicine and essential supplies for Venezuela. Detained and imprisoned in Cape Verde for the past year, Saab has also been tortured. Saab is battling cancer and urgently needs to be cared for by his doctors in Venezuela.

To support the release of Alex Saab, please sign the petition at tinger.com/202psn.

My fellow Venezuelans;

Today, [Aug. 12], one day before the hearing before the Constitutional Court, which I was not allowed to attend, it is 427 days since I was kidnapped in the Republic of Cape Verde under direct instructions from the United States. It is 427 days since I was kidnapped in the Republic of Cape Verde under direct instructions from the United States. It is 427 days since I was kidnapped in the Republic of Cape Verde under direct instructions from the United States.

This August marks 244 years of enslavement—until Emancipation in 1863—with its countless atrocities, including Marcus Garvey, Fred Hampton and Russell Maroon Shoatz, while a number died in that month: W.E.B Du Bois, Huey P. Newton and Jonathan Jackson. Jackson was killed Aug. 7, 1970, while attempting to free the imprisoned Soledad Brothers, who included his brother, Black Panther leader George Jackson. One year and two weeks later, on Aug. 21, 1971, George Jackson was executed by prison guards. His assassination was an important spark leading to the heroic Attica Prison Rebellion in September 1971.

Your donations matter!

Workers World honors martyrs George and Jonathan Jackson.

For a donation of $75 to $100 to $300 a year, members receive a 1-year’s subscription, letters about timely issues and one, two or three free subscriptions, respectively, to give to friends. Supporters can receive a copy of the book, “What road to socialism?” (Notify us.) Or read it for free at workers.org/books.

Write checks, either monthly or once a year, to: Workers World and mail them with your name and address to 147 W. 24th St., 2nd Floor, New York, NY 10011. Or sign up to donate online at workers.org.

We’re grateful for your help in building Workers World!
Nabisco: Quit stealing workers’ wages

By Lyn Neely

Nearly all of the entire multinational workforce of over 200 at Portland’s Nabisco factory went on strike Aug. 10, shutting down the bakery lines. They have been without a decent contract for five years and are fighting to keep the benefits they have earned. Portland’s striking workers, represented by Bakery, Confectionery, Tobacco Workers and Grain Millers (BCTGM) Local 364, have the backing of workers in four other unions at the plant, who are honoring the picket lines. They are getting tremendous support from the community, organizations, unions and other striking workers in Portland. Rallies were held in front of the plant Aug. 14 and 21.

Nabisco’s parent company, Mondelēz International, is trying to take away workers’ pensions, increase their health care deductible to $4,000, stop paying time and a half for weekend work and outsource workers’ jobs. Workers say these cuts would cost them tens of thousands of dollars a year in wages. Workers say it is not the pandemic snack boom, Nabisco employees continue to work as “essential workers.” They often worked 12- to 16-hour shifts, some times up to 18 hours a day.

Profits the workers generated for Mondelēz in 2020 nearly doubled from the first to the second quarter of 2021. (marketwatch.com) Mondelēz is exploiting its growth rate steadily climb since the first quarter of 2020, and it made $26.6 billion in revenue in 2020. (statista.com)

Over 2,000 workers across the country have joined Portland in striking Mondelēz. The sales distribution center in Aurora, Colo., went out Aug. 12. Baking stopped in Nabisco factories in Richmond, Va., where 400 workers went out Aug. 16, and in Chicago Aug. 20.

Sen. Bernie Sanders tweeted support for the strikes. Actor Danny DeVito tweeted his followers, asking them to boycott Nabisco products until Mondelēz meets strikers’ demands.

Frito-Lay workers from Kansas, who recently ended their strike, sent pizza to the picket lines. Workers from Portland’s iconic Voodoo Donuts, currently on strike, sent boxes of donuts. (More on those strikes at workers.org)

With the Richmond workers on strike, a message of Southern worker solidarity came from Alabama. Haeden Wright, president of United Mine Worker Auxiliary Local 2368 and 2245, tweeted Aug. 21: “Every U.S. #Nabisco bakery is now #strike! Sending love and solidarity to each location as they strike together to demand fair compensation and working conditions. The Auxiliary at #WarriorMet stands with you!”

For five months, the striking Alabama coal miners have walked the picket line against Warrior Met Coal to fight against unfair wages, unsafe conditions and inadequate health care.

An injury to one is an injury to all! Local 364 Vice President Mike told Labor Radio on KBOO that Mondelēz International has the time, money and laws and has been insatiable since 2016. He said they threaten “If we don’t take what they want, they will shut down bakeries and send it to Mexico.” (tinyurl.com/omnasacs) Mondelēz sent 600 jobs from Chicago to Mexico in 2016 and closed New Jersey and Georgia production lines earlier this year.

Workers at Mexican Mondelēz plants make 97 cents an hour and have to be bussed in long distances to work 12-hour shifts. Local 364 members said management tells them the benefits they receive in the U.S. are only possible because Mexican workers are paid so little. One worker at the Portland rally said workers rejected a recent contract because it is asking for Mexican workers to be exploited. Mexican workers want a union too.

Burlingham said Mondelēz offered Nabisco workers a one-year contract at the beginning of the COVID pandemic. The contract was passed nationally, but the Portland union rejected it, because it didn’t include constant turnover, a revolving door of workers. In reference to the rejected contract terms, he explained: “Temp workers have no benefits and make less of a wage.” Burlingham emphasized that Mondelēz will be exploiting workers here, just like they are exploiting Mexican workers. “Not only do we say workers in Mexico don’t deserve a job, but when their work is being exploited for profit of a company like this, that hurts them too.”

The workers say they plan to strike until the company agrees to negotiate a new contract. One worker speaking at the Women’s March Aug. 21 said “In every city there were so many union groups. Thanks for all the support. We will be there for you when your turn comes.”

Workers exploits workers just like Amazon, and we should show support any way we can. ☐

Philadelphia, homelessness and the opioid crisis

By Princess Harmony

A spirited protest took place in Philadelphia’s Kensington area Aug. 11, with a large group of neighbors, concerned people and organizations marching from McPherson Square Park to a City Council meeting at Elkins Elementary School.

What were folks rallying about?

The city of Philadelphia had announced that it had an ongoing effort to clear homeless encampments in its Kensington section Aug. 18. For some time, residents have asked the city to assist with problems related to the encampments, and they resent that their pleas for help have been ignored.

A diverse array of groups participated in the protest, including Kensington Action Network (an organization that assists addicted people), Harrowgate Civic Association, Kensington Neighborhood Association, Somerton Neighbors for Better Living, Impact Services, Operation Save Our City and the Philadelphia Opioid Overdose Prevention Network.

Residents fear that–as in previous attempts–what will happen is that people in the camps will be pushed around and end up back where they were. This is a legitimate fear; several attempts to move the addicts out of the neighborhood have failed.

Addicted and homeless people in Kensington deserve treatment options and housing–because housing and health care are human rights. The residents of Kensington who are not homeless or addicted deserve a clean and safe neighborhood–something denied them in the past, because of the city’s failure to provide assistance to the unhoused and those with addictions or mental illnesses.

Building a solution

Historically, the relationship between harm reductionists, addicts in the Kensington neighborhood and neighbor residents has been fraught with argument. Nevertheless, it is the residents of Mayor Kenney and the City Council to address the issues actively and adequately in Kensington that have brought together two sides whom nobody thought would come together.

At the Aug. 11 rally and march, protesters chanted, “Where is Jim Kenney?” and made it known that hiding wouldn’t save the mayor from the cries of people, demanding that he act on the conditions in Kensington.

Community activist Chelsea Love, a harm reductionist who works on these issues throughout Philadelphia, told Workers World that this was the first time Kensington residents and resident associations had unified over the situation with harm reductionists and the addicted.

The needs of the people in Kensington were recognized, and harm reductionists learned how to approach the residents to ask them to unite with the harm-reductionist cause. As plans by the city stand, those affected by the upcoming sweep won’t get housing before the Aug. 18. It’s a deadline.

The Office of Homeless Services claims they have beds and wish to offer service. But there are 900 homeless people in Philadelphia, and not that many beds. There have never been enough beds.

City Council Member María Quiñones Sánchez demanded the city act and said the money is there. She said there needs to be quality treatment and treatment beds for the addicted, as well as expanded medication-assisted treatment.

Homelessness and the opioid crisis

Philadelphia’s opioid crisis—which has been raging for years—is at the heart of the issues in Kensington. The heroin “fix” to be found in the Kensington neighborhood is legendary on the East Coast. This fix—tainted with fentanyl and fentanyl analogues like carfentanil, acrylfentanyl, butyrylfentanyl, acrylfentanyl, acrylmethanfentanyl—and by a new different “cut,” xylazine—is killing people by the dozens and even the hundreds.

People come from throughout the city and from nearby areas in Pennsylvania and New Jersey to experience this fix. Kensington has the highest number of drug overdoses and the highest level of drug-related deaths in the state.

This writer has been to Kensington in search of that fix and knows that nothing becomes more important to those who seek it. People begin to live on the streets and yet are still aware they need housing and mental health care.

But there is no concrete plan by the city to give the people what they need. Without a plan, nobody is helped, and none of these problems Philadelphia’s activists have been struggling to get the city to deal with these problems. The people of Kensington should not have to see more addiction and mental illness on their doorsteps, but they do. They know that people on the street are people who need help, people who have fallen on dark times. They shouldn’t be the neighbors’ job to deal with.

The sweep planned by the city will not treat the problem and will be a permanent sweep. The people pushed out will come back again—that’s what happened before. The money spent by the city would be better used to provide housing and treatment for mental and physical ills to all those in need.

The problems in Kensington have increased as the opioid epidemic worsens. Nothing so far has helped the situation. But we have the power to end this cycle. The neighbors have united; the community is more connected to; the community must be listened to; and addicts must be treated and helped. Revolutionaries with a harm reductionist view can aid both activists and residents and help solve these problems. ☐
The following edited interview with Che Nieves, a survivor of the 1971 Attica Prison Rebellion and a founding member of the Young Lords Party in Greenhaven and Attica Prisons, was conducted July 20 by Monica Morenohead, a Workers World managing editor. Segments of Albizu Campos: people’s hero were featured in that issue of Workers World and have appeared in WW issues or will appear in future issues.

Che Nieves: I learned about George Jackson when I was in Attica. I also learned that my island, Puerto Rico, was a colony of the United States and became a colony as a result of the invasion that occurred in 1898, and the people were considered second-class citizens.

Pedro Albizu Campos: people’s hero

I also learned about Pedro Albizu Campos. He was an extraordinary Puerto Rican from the island who went to Harvard and also went into the army. When he came out of the army, he went to Puerto Rico. He was an attorney. He had all the credentials of an attorney, but he was a people’s attorney. In Puerto Rico, he began organizing Puerto Ricans for independence. As a result of his struggles, there were attempts on his life.

He was able to reorganize the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party, which prior to that was sort of centralized, it was centralized in the sense that their whole perception of Puerto Rico was different. They didn’t believe in independence. And Albizu Campos came and changed those policies, changed those concepts, and the whole Nationalist Party became geared towards the independence of Puerto Rico.

But the U.S. government was constantly harassing Albizu Campos and put him in jail. He wound up doing many years in jail, as a result of opposing the U.S. He died in jail. Before he died, he used numerous tactics to destroy this brother. They burned his legs and tortured him in so many ways they killed him.

Before that there were rebellions on the island. [The Ponce Massacre took place in 1937 on Palm Sunday.] Nationalist adults and children were marching on behalf of Pedro Albizu Campos. The U.S. forces in Puerto Rico then shot and killed people at this demonstration.

Che Nieves

‘Independence for Puerto Rico’

[On March 1, 1954, four Puerto Rican Nationalists] went to Congress with the intention of raising the issue of independence of Puerto Rico and to let the world know that Puerto Rico was a colony of the U.S. When they got to Congress, they started shooting, and some politicians got injured. The nationalists got arrested and served close to 23 years in prison. They got out in [1979]. Most of them went back to Puerto Rico and continued struggling for the independence of Puerto Rico.

When we talk about the Young Lords, we are talking about a group of people who were talking about the legacy of the Nationalist Party in Puerto Rico and about the independence of Puerto Rico and what that entails. The Young Lords carried the legacy of struggle for many years. I carried the legacy of struggle in prison as well.

A lot of things happened to me in the process of struggling. Guards put me in cells and constantly beat me up. There was a time I got sick. They put holes into my cell and opened up (water). The whole cell was filled with cold water. It’s like trying to put out a fire. But they were aiming at me in my cell. In the process, I got sick. I almost died on one occasion. But I’m here, and I’m still struggling.
Disability rights and justice – for the people, against incarceration

The following was excerpted from a July 29 webinar held by the Disability Justice and Rights Caucus of Workers World Party that emphasized the interconnections between the struggles of disabled people and incarcerated people. Caucus members participating below were Brian Shea and mYia X. The entire webinar can be viewed on YouTube at Workers World Party. (youtube.com/user/ww/video) mYia: The Black Panthers made it a priority that every single chapter had to have a medical clinic. Members of the party really saw a look at why health care had to be at the top of the list, because they saw the level of racism and neglect — and also the profit the medical industrial complex was making. The Panthers initiated the free health clinics to combat health problems which existed amongst the poor and the oppressed. And to this day, we still see that. The drug companies, the power companies,aries, the pharmacies, all private hospitals are still taking huge profits — and that includes profits from the prisons and jails.

To this day, members of the Black Panther Party, who have spent decades behind the wall, are dealing with multiple illnesses and disabilities. These are our warriors that we’re fighting for on this side for justice, for the disabled and all of our people. The work that the Black Panther Party and their clinics were able to do — that really stands out to me. And that Party was definitely influenced by what was happening in countries working toward socialism — Cuba, North Korea, China.

Cuba’s socialist vision

Brian: I was in Cuba during some of the most severe parts of the Special Period, when the Soviet Union was killed, and Cuba lost it as a major trade partner. The U.S. had tightened the illegal blockade through the Torricelli Act in 1992 to try to squeeze Cuba. It was during that time, when there were disabled folk organizing each other through the social organizations, through schools, all kinds of ways. To bring forward into society what the specific needs were of all disabled folks. They were everywhere from the neighborhood CDRs [Committees for the Defense of the Revolution] to the women’s organization, to any other organization in Cuban society.

Even though the material resources were thin, and Cuba was still being punished by the illegal blockade, there was, and is, a political priority that sets the first need to get addressed as the needs of the people — and not the needs of shareholders or corporate donors or anything else.

mYia: Comandante Fidel and the Cuban people created ELAM [Escuela Latinoamericana de Medicina]. That’s the Latin American School of Medicine, the medical school in Cuba. It opened on November 15, 1959. To take a quote from Fidel Castro, its spirit in solidarity will be so deep that it will never be erased.

We know that Cuba every single year does so much for its people. Even when things happen, few lives are lost because from the elders to the youngest and even the animals, there is a plan that takes care of people.

In the U.S., people displaced in Hurricane Katrina in 2005 to this day are still displaced, and parts of Louisiana are still decimated. That rips the bandages off to show you the country that so say is the richest country in the world. But that depends on what is your measure of rich? Is your measure of rich only about what you gain from capital? Or is your measure of wealth the quality of life for your people, the quality of life for the inhabitants of the country, its humanity? And that’s what we see in Cuba.

And to quote George Jackson, if you are incarcerated, feel the pain of the American people.

Cuba prioritizes the lives of people. It’s not about profit.

U.S. profits from incarceration

mYia: The U.S. prison-industrial complex is built on profit. And when it becomes privatized, all the problems are exacerbated. Just last week we heard that prison systems that released people from incarceration because of the COVID-19 crisis at the height of pandemic, the prison authorities are telling prisoners they must return back to prison!

This system is a vicious beast that we are living under. I think about Mumia Abu-Jamal in prison [since 1982], again on the brink of losing his life [from health problems], because the system is trying to kill him by any means necessary. And if not for the movement, which includes the disability rights and justice movement here and around the world, Mumia and so many other political prisoners would already be dead.

And to quote George Jackson, if you are incarcerated, the mere fact that the system is so corrupt makes them all political prisoners. So we’re not differentiating one prisoner over the other.

We call for the abolishment of prisons. We don’t stand with “reform” for a “kinder, gentler” incarceration system that would still keep our people in the system of incarceration. We call for releasing people now and give them the resources now — especially when we think about this pandemic.

How many billionaires have continued to increase their coffers during the pandemic — the amount of money that Jeff Bezos has made — a man that superexploits prison labor, especially since he acquired Whole Foods. Even within the prison, the people are given a minuscule amount of resources, while so many others are stacking and packing their accounts.

Right in our faces, we see what is happening around the world, where countries can’t access to what they need, aren’t allowed, because of sanctions, to be able to send or receive resources to be able to take care of their people. It’s the same thing we see happening here in the United States, the same thing we see happening behind the walls of mass incarceration.

We have to continue the struggle. We have to continue the fight because this is injustice.

People's power sets Minister King X free

By Judy Greenspan
Oakland, Calif.

Aug. 19 — In what can only be described as a real victory for the people, the Solano County District Attorney has dropped all charges against Jonathan Magee, arrested in July as part of an illegal protest at the California state prison where Mumia Abu-Jamal is incarcerated.

King was released to the community. A formerly incarcerated person, King has been one of the primary organizers of a series of demonstrations in California commemorating both Black August prisoner resistance and the hunger strikes of political prisoners for justice. King, an educator and artist, is a leader of California Prison Focus and KAOE Universal.

The California Department of Corrections police had grabbed King the morning of Aug. 9 and eventually imprisoned him at the Solano County jail. Police charged him with violating the little-known and rarely used Penal Code Statute 3571, which prohibits anyone convicted of a felony in the state to be on prison property without permission from the warden. They also charged him with a parole violation.

(San Francisco Bay View, Aug. 17)

But the real reason behind this felony case was that King dared to organize and educate the movement outside prisons, on behalf of elderly political prisoners among the early prisoners’ rights movement inside prisons. On July 15, King attended a small gathering near the California Medical Facility at Vacaville, where he issued an open letter to למהי, the longest held U.S. political prisoner, is incarcerated.

Magee, who has been in prison 58 years, is the only incarcerated survivor of Jonathan Jackson’s bold attempt to free his brother George Jackson on Aug. 7, 1970, by seizing a Marin County courtroom. Magee had just been turned down again for parole last month. (Workers World, July 27)

The CDC and the state of California have spent the last five decades attempting to silence the vibrant, freedom-loving movements of incarcerated people. In language dating to the U.S. conspiracy against liberation and progressive movements known as COINTELPRO, the police report stemming from King’s arrest labeled King a “Black Identity Extremist” and a “Black Supremacist.” The FBI and other police organizations use similar language to attempt to criminalize the current Black Lives Matter movement.

A quick response by organizations including No Justice Under Capitalism, the National Lawyers Guild of San Francisco, Legal Services for Prisoners with Children, EMPACT, Poor Magazine and California Prison Focus brought rapid attention to King’s retaliatory arrest and pressure on the state to drop the charges. King’s release today is truly a people’s victory.

Richard Tan, one of King’s attorneys and an activist in the prisoners’ rights movement, told the San Francisco Bay View, “Minister King is a peaceful man. He advocates for the Agreement to End Hostilities, an agreement to end violence across racial divides in California prisons. We’re very pleased that the Solano District Attorney elected to dismiss all the charges.”

Minister King X holds the program for the “Revolutionary Memorial Service for George Jackson” conducted after Jackson’s assassination.
Black August commemorated at the gates of San Quentin Prison

By Judy Greenspan
San Rafael, Calif.

August 21 — Overcoming both dangerous air quality from California’s cataclysmic fires and the state’s desperate attempts at intimidation, veterans and activists of the prisoners’ rights movement marched to the West Gate of San Quentin Prison today to commemorate Black August and the spirit of George Jackson.

Fifty years ago on this date, George Jackson, a Black Panther Party Field Marshal, was assassinated by San Quentin guards behind the prison walls, an action that led to the historic Attica Rebellion in New York State. Organizing and actions by Black and Indigenous people imprisoned in San Quentin have been integral to the prisoners’ rights movement.

In an act of state intimidation prior to the memorial event, one of its key organizers, Minister King X, was kidnapped off the streets of Oakland by California Department of Corrections police. Minister King X, a formerly incarcerated Black activist, educator and activist, was charged with violating a little-known California statute prohibiting formerly incarcerated people from being on prison property without state permission. The charge was dismissed two days later in response to the protest, but the state’s repressive tactics placed a chill on the event’s organizing. (San Francisco Bay View, Aug. 19)

The Black August commemoration was a mixture of speeches, music, spoken word, poetry and phone calls from people on the inside. Initiated by California Prison Focus and KAGE Universal, the event was endorsed by a broad range of organizations including the Taz Foundation, EMAPCT, Blunt Funk, Dope Era, So Black So Beautiful, Poor Magazine, the San Francisco Bay View National Black Newspaper, Black Riders/New Africans, Jailhouse Lawyers Speak, Cell Block to City Block and the Prisoners Solidarity Committee of Workers World Party.

At the rally, speeches and music were projected from a mock prison cell mounted on the bed of a pickup truck, alternating with taped messages from KAGE Universal. Oakland Abolition and Solidarity proudly held their banner with a picture of George Jackson and his quote: “They have learned that resistance is possible. The holds are beginning to slip away.”

Several incarcerated people called out from inside the walls with greetings and messages of “Free them all” and reflection on how the inhumane and racist conditions inside the prisons sparked a large and militant movement both inside and outside the walls in the late 1960s and ’70s. Kim Pollak of California Prison Focus read letters from people still inside, who were veterans of early prisoners’ rights struggles.

Leia Schenk of EMAPCT spoke of Rachelle Magee, the longest-held political prisoner in the U.S. Magee is the sole prisoner survivor of the takeover of the Marin County Courthouse by Jonathan Jackson and others on Aug. 7, 1970. That bold action by the younger brother of George Jackson was met by a hail of bullets by San Quentin guards, killing all the incarcerated activists who were resisting, except Magee, who has now spent over 58 years in California prisons.

‘Free Mumia — free all the political prisoners!’ Family members of prisoners spoke about a recent COVID outbreak on death row and other areas of San Quentin. Parts of the prison were on lockdown due to the spread of the Delta variant. Speakers called for mass releases of elderly and immunocompromised incarcerated people. In 2020, due to an unsafe transfer of hundreds of incarcerated people into San Quentin, over 70% of the population contracted COVID-19, and 29 prisoners died.

Famous depiction of Nat Turner planning rebellion

By Kathy Durkin

August 21 marks the 190th anniversary of the bold, courageous insurrection against the genocidal system of enslavement led by Nat Turner in 1831. Although the capitalist ruling class and media have vilified Turner, he has been viewed as a hero by millions of Black and Indigenous people still inside, who were veterans of the most heinous forms of state-sponsored repression and oppression in U.S. history. They marched through the countryside for 48 hours in Southampton County, Va., in one of the major armed struggles against this heinous exploitative system. Their goal was to reach Jerusalem, Va. to obtain arms to expand the fight for freedom.

During this militant rebellion, some whites were killed. The number is minuscule compared to the tens of thousands of Black people who were tortured and killed during the 244 years of enslavement.

In the South there were constant acts of resistance by enslaved people, with at least 250 revolts. The most well-known uprisings were led by Denmark Vesey, Gabriel Prosser and Turner, who paid with their lives, as did most of their compatriots. But there were many other heroes in the long, arduous struggle for emancipation.

By Judy Greenspan
San Rafael, Calif.

August 21 — Overcoming both dangerous air quality from California’s cataclysmic fires and the state’s desperate attempts at intimidation, veterans and activists of the prisoners’ rights movement marched to the West Gate of San Quentin Prison today to commemorate Black August and the spirit of George Jackson.

Fifty years ago on this date, George Jackson, a Black Panther Party Field Marshal, was assassinated by San Quentin guards behind the prison walls, an action that led to the historic Attica Rebellion in New York State. Organizing and actions by Black and Indigenous people imprisoned in San Quentin have been integral to the prisoners’ rights movement.

In an act of state intimidation prior to the memorial event, one of its key organizers, Minister King X, was kidnapped off the streets of Oakland by California Department of Corrections police. Minister King X, a formerly incarcerated Black activist, educator and activist, was charged with violating a little-known California statute prohibiting formerly incarcerated people from being on prison property without state permission. The charge was dismissed two days later in response to the protest, but the state’s repressive tactics placed a chill on the event’s organizing. (San Francisco Bay View, Aug. 19)

The Black August commemoration was a mixture of speeches, music, spoken word, poetry and phone calls from people on the inside. Initiated by California Prison Focus and KAGE Universal, the event was endorsed by a broad range of organizations including the Taz Foundation, EMAPCT, Blunt Funk, Dope Era, So Black So Beautiful, Poor Magazine, the San Francisco Bay View National Black Newspaper, Black Riders/New Africans, Jailhouse Lawyers Speak, Cell Block to City Block and the Prisoners Solidarity Committee of Workers World Party.

At the rally, speeches and music were projected from a mock prison cell mounted on the bed of a pickup truck, alternating with taped messages from KAGE Universal. Oakland Abolition and Solidarity proudly held their banner with a picture of George Jackson and his quote: “They have learned that resistance is possible. The holds are beginning to slip away.”

Several incarcerated people called out from inside the walls with greetings and messages of “Free them all” and reflection on how the inhumane and racist conditions inside the prisons sparked a large and militant movement both inside and outside the walls in the late 1960s and ’70s. Kim Pollak of California Prison Focus read letters from people still inside, who were veterans of early prisoners’ rights struggles.

Leia Schenk of EMAPCT spoke of Rachelle Magee, the longest-held political prisoner in the U.S. Magee is the sole prisoner survivor of the takeover of the Marin County Courthouse by Jonathan Jackson and others on Aug. 7, 1970. That bold action by the younger brother of George Jackson was met by a hail of bullets by San Quentin guards, killing all the incarcerated activists who were resisting, except Magee, who has now spent over 58 years in California prisons.

‘Free Mumia — free all the political prisoners!’ Family members of prisoners spoke about a recent COVID outbreak on death row and other areas of San Quentin. Parts of the prison were on lockdown due to the spread of the Delta variant. Speakers called for mass releases of elderly and immunocompromised incarcerated people. In 2020, due to an unsafe transfer of hundreds of incarcerated people into San Quentin, over 70% of the population contracted COVID-19, and 29 prisoners died.

Famous depiction of Nat Turner planning rebellion

By Kathy Durkin

August 21 marks the 190th anniversary of the bold, courageous insurrection against the genocidal system of enslavement led by Nat Turner in 1831. Although the capitalist ruling class and media have vilified Turner, he has been viewed as a hero by millions of Black and other oppressed people in the U.S. and worldwide.

Turner, who had been kept in bondage since his birth in 1800, escaped 75 of his tormentors and destroyed the most of the most heinous forms of state-sponsored repression and oppression in U.S. history. They marched through the countryside for 48 hours in Southampton County, Va., in one of the major armed struggles against this heinous exploitative system. Their goal was to reach Jerusalem, Va. to obtain arms to expand the fight for freedom.

During this militant rebellion, some whites were killed. The number is minuscule compared to the tens of thousands of Black people who were tortured and killed during the 244 years of enslavement.

In the South there were constant acts of resistance by enslaved people, with at least 250 revolts. The most well-known uprisings were led by Denkm...
You’ve heard it all before

We’ve heard it all before. The U.S. government claims a plot, a plot, a plot! A crisis, a crisis, a crisis! And always— surprise!— against the people of the world. We’ve heard it all before. The U.S. government claims a plot, a plot, a plot! A crisis, a crisis, a crisis! And always— surprise!— against the people of the world. We’ve heard it all before. The U.S. government claims a plot, a plot, a plot! A crisis, a crisis, a crisis! And always— surprise!— against the people of the world.

The tears of empire

By Mumia Abu-Jamal

The following lightly edited commentary aired on Prison Radio August 15.

With the dramatic fall of Kabul, through the forces of the Taliban, the alligator tears of the political class are falling, decrying the costs of U.S. withdrawal from Afghanistan.

What has been thoroughly forgotten, however, is the unprecedented mass protests of February 2003, before the war began. When the Earth shook with antiwar fervor in countries across the globe. Then President George W. Bush would ignore these protests as a mere focus group; his words, focus.

In the 2004 book, “The Citizens of the Empire,” author and critic Robert Jensen recounted “the worldwide actions on February 15, 2003, were the single largest political demonstration in history.” Millions of people all over the globe poured into the streets to try to derail the Bush Administration’s mad rush to war. How in an alleged democracy can the government so easily ignore the views of millions? It happened, and chaos came to Afghanistan to wreak havoc for over 20 years. What if the protests had won? We will never know.

Audio for this commentary, made available by Noelle Hanrahan, is at prisonradio.org.

Afghanistan: New U.S. sanctions threaten mass hunger

Continued from page 1

to freeze Afghan monetary reserves. Financial sanctions have been in place since the aftermath of the 9/11 attack.

A ‘Crime Against Humanity’

The U.S. is now leveraging its last measure of control to inflict maximum damage. This is not a by-product of the confusion of war. This is an enforced and calculated crime against humanity. Depriving civilians of access to food or targeting civilians in a systematic policy that causes suffering and death is defined in international law as a Crime Against Humanity.

Rappeport described the impact of other unilateral economic sanctions. “There is precedent for the IMF to block countries from their currency reserves. Earlier this year, the fund said that Venezuela would not have access to the $5 billion of SDRs that it would have received, because of a dispute over the Maduro government’s legitimacy.” (NY Times, Aug. 21)

Venezuela was a country that, before the U.S.-imposed economic sanctions, provided for its population with generous food subsidies, free medical care, free education for the whole population and millions of subsidized housing units. Now U.S. sanctions are strangling Venezuela.

Afghanistan is now dependent on shipments of U.S. dollars every few weeks. Its imports are about five times the country’s total output. Now, the U.S. government is threatening to further tighten the screws on Afghanistan.

In 2001, the U.S. government waved the flag of “human rights”—women’s oppression in Afghanistan, the former Soviet occupation of Afghanistan by the Taliban—to justify a war to control that country’s land, labor and wealth, its pathway to oil and gas. In 2021, the U.S. is withdrawing from Afghanistan. Women and girls will be under reactionary Taliban rule. There is a right fuller of concern about that. No progressive revolution is occurring. That happened in 2001, when Afghan women and communists took power and began to overturn centuries of patriarchal rule in the country. But U.S. intervention and CIA plotting ended that positive development—and set in motion the conditions that put the Taliban in power. (‘Beware the Siren Song: Women and Afghanistan,’ workers.org)

We can’t be deceived by the capitalist crocodile tears now being shed about the fate of women in Afghanistan. How did Madison Avenue women respond to the plight of Afghan women and girls when the U.S. began bombing them in 2001? Anna Wintour, editor of Vogue magazine, organized a shipment of free lipstick to that country, allegedly to raise women’s “morale” —really to test a new market for the cosmetics industry. (London Telegraph, Nov. 27, 2002)

We are for women’s liberation, and we are against imperialism at the same time. We know that women and girls—oppressed people will never find a path to liberation through the morass of capitalism and imperialism. There is an endless list of wars in which imperialists performed their sleight of hand to mask the fact that they themselves are the oppressors of the oppressed.

The U.S. government, whether headed by Democrats or Republicans, fabricates evidence, deceives by omissions, undermines progressive movements and pits us against each other — to try to fool workers and oppressed people and force us to toil and kill for the capitalism that exploits us.

To work for the liberation of women and gender-oppressed people — for the liberation of workers and all oppressed people — we must stay steadfast on the road to socialism, organizing in every creative way possible against capitalism. ☐

New Jersey says no to U.S. blockade of Cuba

A “New Jersey in Solidarity with Cuba and Against U.S. Imperialism” demonstration was held Aug. 11 at One Gateway Center in Newark, N.J. The action was sponsored by a broad coalition of organizations led by N.J. Anti-War Agenda and joined by People’s Organization For Progress, International Action Center, Green Party, Cuba Five, IPFW Pastors for Peace, Workers World Party and Veterans For Peace-Chapter 21.

— Report by Sara Flounders; Photo: Bob Witnak

U.N. officials now warn of dire food shortages. The World Food Program is warning of a dramatic rise in the number of hungry people in Afghanistan. This is the very real threat that stands behind President Joe Biden’s sudden announcement on Aug. 22, a week after the government collapse, that Washington was considering extending evacuation efforts beyond his Aug. 31 deadline to leave Afghanistan.

Biden said that about 28,000 U.S. citizens, allies and Afghans have been transported out since the Taliban’s takeover of Kabul Aug. 15. As many as 80,000 Americans and Afghans who worked for the U.S. are still scheduled to be evacuated. This is the excuse for an extended stay while new, even more onerous concessions are demanded.

This is an urgent moment to demand: U.S. out of Afghanistan — totally out, and end the U.S.-imposed sanctions. Let Afghanistan Live! ☐

Marchers in Washington, D.C., protest the Iraq War March 21, 2009, with the banner, “Fight the rich, not their war.”
The United States intensifies Haiti’s suffering

By G. Dunkel

The Department of Homeland Security

What Secretary of Homeland Security Alejandro Mayorkas said and did in a brief trip to Miami Aug. 19 reflects and exemplifies with more acumen our history on Haiti.

In 1805, a year after its hard-won independence, President Thomas Jefferson imposed an embargo on Haiti that lasted until 1826. The U.S. invaded Haiti in 1915, after stealing its gold reserves, and stayed until 1934. From 1957-86 the U.S. supported the hated Duvalier dynasty. It then came back in 2004 to remove President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and is still there under the guise of various U.N. programs.

Mayorkas met with representatives of the Cuban community in Miami to announce new sanctions against three Cuban officials and a polit entity of the Haitian community to announce that the Biden administration would not be extending Temporary Protected Status for Haitians, even after the devastating 7.2 earthquake Aug. 14 — made even more devastating when Tropical Storm Grace drenched Haiti Aug. 16. Haiti is already working in the U.S. legally. Members of the Haitian diaspora in the U.S. sent over $3.8 billion to Haiti in 2020, so this decision on TPS is going to have a major impact on Haiti, where remittances make up about one-third of its economy.

supplement program in the three departments — Grand’Anse, Sud and Nippes — that were most affected by the earthquake and Tropical Storm Grace, before these two disasters occurred. According to U.N. survey data, 25% of the people living in these departments suffered from “acute food insecurity," that is, they frequently did not get the food they needed for their normal activities, even before the earthquake.

Food is getting through to the main towns, but isolated communities have only themselves to rely on. Some towns have so much devastation that helicopters can't safely land.

Cuba, Mexico, Chile and the Dominican Republic have all sent teams of doctors or rescue workers to the earthquake-stricken areas. Cuban medical workers were already on the scene as part of Cuba’s aid to Haiti.

What has distinguished the U.S. response is that in place of sending the two hospital ships which it has on the East Coast, the U.S. sent the USNS Arlington, an amphibious transport dock with 400 sailors and 220 Marines.

Some Haitians on Twitter, along with commentators on some conservative websites, have expressed support for the presence of U.S. troops. Others have expressed opposition, seeing the U.S. “humanitarian mission as a military pre-text. Haiti-Liberte says that “the Haitian people must now confront the arrogance and repressive desires of the army of the imperialist power dominating the region.”

Beyond the pain, suffering and deaths caused by the earthquake and tropical storm lies the threat of COVID-19. Less than 0.1% of Haitians have been vaccinated as of Aug. 1; inoculations only began the last week of July. Buying masks and soap for hand washing is financially out of reach for most Haitians, who live on less than $2 a day.

Rain in Greenland?

By Paddy Colligan

A story that made its way into numerous media toward the end of August concerned rain falling at Summit, the Greenland Environmental Monitoring station located at the highest point on the Greenland ice sheet.

From Aug. 14 to 16, rain fell for several hours — an extraordinary event at this station, 400 miles above the Arctic Circle and at an elevation of more than 10,000 feet.

The ice cores from the Greenland ice sheet are a very rich source showing that air temperatures had previously been above freezing only six times over the last 2,000 years.

The unseasonably warm weather experienced in Greenland, as elsewhere in the Arctic, is partly related to major changes in the high-altitude jet stream. The extremes of weather experienced in the U.S. in recent years have been partly attributed to similar changes.

Conditions in the Greenland ice sheet greatly contribute to the progression of global climate change. In recent years, significant melting events have taken place on the ice sheet, adding to sea level rise. But more than just a measure of sea level rise is involved.

The massive amounts of meltwater from the ice sheet are fresh, not salt, water. When fresh water flows into the ocean, the water density, temperature and overall salinity are changed. This affects weather, sea life and the amount of carbon dioxide the water absorbs.

The ice core, also known as an ice core, is affected by melting events, which results in lakes of blue meltwater (glacial water appearing blue due to sediment), rivers of runoffs, and increased flow of information of darker ice when melted snow refreezes and newly exposed land. The decrease in reflective white surface area, or albedo, results in a feedback loop, so that additional solar heat is absorbed by

The white surface of the ice sheet is particularly reflective of sunlight. But albedo is lowered when darker ice is exposed to sunlight, which in turn further melts the ice sheet.

The massive amounts of meltwater, which include information of the past 1,500 years, can be used to study climate change and how it affects the earth. This information is critical for understanding how climate change is affecting the Earth and what steps can be taken to mitigate it.

Despite attacks and repression of their Party by the government, the Communist Party of Kenya held its first-ever Women’s League Convention July 31. The convention began with a hoisting of the Party’s flag, the singing of The Internationale and other revolutionary songs being performed.

The Party's women cadre spent the day debating and discussing the conditions of women in Kenya. They redelivered the “Women's Rights Are Human Rights” declaration to the government, the Communist Party by the government, the Communist Party of Kenya held its first-ever Women’s League Convention July 31. The convention began with a hoisting of the Party’s flag, the singing of The Internationale and other revolutionary songs being performed.

The keynote speaker for the convention was Comrade Sefa Saní, an organizer and Kenyan Communist who spoke of the necessity of class analysis when handling the women’s question in class struggle. She spoke of and condemned the bourgeoisie women of Kenya, who consistently collaborated with the corrupt regime to throw working-class women under the bus. She ended her speech by emphasizing that the central role of the women’s cadre must be to immediately begin building the Party.

Comrade Sani said: “We have to understand that as revolutionaries, we must always struggle for the liberation of our society from the exploitation and oppression of women by men. This must start from our own homes: in our relationships with our mothers, our sisters, our girl friends, our wives and our daughters, we must struggle to liberate ourselves from abusing, using and exploiting women. We must struggle to cure the disease of male chauvinism within ourselves that we have inherited from our negative traditional cultures that today blossom with the blessing of capitalism and imperialism.”

Congratulations to the women comrades of the Communist Party of Kenya for this historic advance!

El presidente Xi Jinping, informó al Primer Foro Internacional de Cooperación en Materia de Vacunas COVID-19 en la donación por parte del país de 2.000 millones de dosis de vacunas COVID-19 a países en desarrollo y pobres en los próximos cuatro meses. Esto podría contribuir a fomentar la solidaridad y hacer accesibles las vacunas en el mundo en desarrollo. La declaración de compartir tecnología y ayudar a los países a producir sus propias vacunas sitúa a China en una trayectoria de colaboración mundial, a través de la cooperación y el intercambio de recursos, habilidades y tecnología, muchos países podrían desarrollar la producción en el extranjero de las vacunas desarrolladas por China. El aumento de la capacidad de producción local ahorrará tiempo, vidas y costes de transporte internacional.

La decisión de compartir tecnología y ayudar a los países a producir sus propias vacunas sitúa a China en una trayectoria de colaboración mundial, a través de la Organización Mundial de la Salud. La OMS está dominada y financiada significativamente por una de las pocas riquezas del mundo a través de la Fundación Bill y Melinda Gates. La decisión de compartir la tecnología y la capacidad de producción mundial es una profunda amenaza para la Organización Mundial de la Salud. Y en la ayuda al mundo para hacer frente a la pandemia. Cada vacuna entregada. (Global Times, 5 de agosto)

La declaración de la Casa Blanca, engañosa y fraudulenta, refleja la decisión negativa de la clase dirigente estadounidense a reconocer los logros de China contra el COVID dentro del país y en la ayuda al mundo para hacer frente a la pandemia. Abarca tres puntos principales: en primer lugar, la Casa Blanca, engañosa y fraudulenta, refleja la decisión negativa de la clase dirigente estadounidense a reconocer los logros de China contra el COVID dentro del país y en la ayuda al mundo para hacer frente a la pandemia. En segundo lugar, con la compra de decenas de millones de dosis por parte del gobierno de Estados Unidos, se pueden obtener gran- des beneficios. Pero la decisión de compartir la tecnología y la capacidad de producción mundial es una profunda amenaza para la Organización Mundial de la Salud. Sin embargo, el comunicado de prensa de la Casa Blanca del 3 de agosto se jactaba de que la donación “consolidó a Estados Unidos como líder mundial en donaciones de vacunas COVID-19” y que esta cantidad es “más que las donaciones de los demás países juntos y refleja la gene- rosidad del espíritu estadounidense”. El anuncio de Biden fue recogido acríticamente por los medios de comunicación corporativos estadounidenses, con molestarse en comprobar los hechos de esta declaración salvajemente exagerada sobre la importancia de 110 millones de dosis a 65 países. China ya ha distribuido 750 millones de dosis a 104 países y lo ha hecho con tranquilidad y respeto al intercambio de la información científica. Los 2.000 millones de dosis anunciados el 5 de agosto se suman a la enorme cantidad ya entregada. (Global Times, 5 de agosto)

La declaración de la Casa Blanca, engañosa y fraudulenta, refleja la decisión negativa de la clase dirigente estadounidense a reconocer los logros de China en la lucha contra el COVID dentro del país y en la ayuda al mundo para hacer frente a la pandemia. El anuncio de Biden fue recogido acríticamente por los medios de comunicación corporativos estadounidenses, con molestarse en comprobar los hechos de esta declaración salvajemente exagerada sobre la importancia de 110 millones de dosis a 65 países. China ya ha distribuido 750 millones de dosis a 104 países y lo ha hecho con tranquilidad y respeto al intercambio de la información científica. Los 2.000 millones de dosis anunciados el 5 de agosto se suman a la enorme cantidad ya entregada. (Global Times, 5 de agosto)

La declaración de la Casa Blanca, engañosa y fraudulenta, refleja la decisión negativa de la clase dirigente estadounidense a reconocer los logros de China contra el COVID dentro del país y en la ayuda al mundo para hacer frente a la pandemia. El anuncio de Biden fue recogido acríticamente por los medios de comunicación corporativos estadounidenses, con molestarse en comprobar los hechos de esta declaración salvajemente exagerada sobre la importancia de 110 millones de dosis a 65 países. China ya ha distribuido 750 millones de dosis a 104 países y lo ha hecho con tranquilidad y respeto al intercambio de la información científica. Los 2.000 millones de dosis anunciados el 5 de agosto se suman a la enorme cantidad ya entregada. (Global Times, 5 de agosto)